“Make it happen” on East 7th

by Deanna Foster
Executive Director,
Dayton’s Bluff Community Council

Make it Happen is our motto for East 7th Street. Together, we are going to create a vibrant urban destination and neighborhood center for the Dayton’s Bluff community on St. Paul’s East Side. The Dayton’s Bluff Community Council is taking the lead on many of the recommendations from the Near East Side Area Task Force, which has completed its “Roadmap” for action. The Near East Side Area Roadmap is scheduled for adoption by the Planning Commission/City Council in spring/early summer of 2012. FIRST we envision our favorite destination neighborhood business district…

• visually the area is clean, attractive and vibrant
• pedestrians walk safely, creating an abundance of activity
• a broad array of businesses enthral local and regional patrons
• colorful art and flowers abound
• buildings and signs have a local feel with an international flavor
• festivities and celebrations are frequent
• trees soften the landscape and lantern-style lighting adds old world charm
• sitting areas abound for relaxation and soaking up the sun
• laughter overflows from children’s playgrounds
• art invades touch; music taps feet
• food and good company feed the body and soul
• parks and paths keep us fit
• history enthralls visitors and residents alike
• new signs encourage pedestrians to “walk the bluff”
• creative crosswalk designs slow traffic and respect pedestrian activity
• previously vacant and unproductive land and buildings are reclaimed and we make it happen.

As part of Make it Happen, the Community Council has launched a campaign to invite business and property owners to share their ideas and plans for expanding business opportunities and improving the appeal of the district. We will work together to increase the number, quality and range of businesses that locate on East 7th Street by creating an information center that supports the recruitment and placement of businesses in vacant properties. Redevelopment activities at Beacon Bluff (old 3M site) are an excellent opportunity for Dayton’s Bluff to capitalize on the opportunities that new development brings to a community. Metropolitan State University is also building and growing their presence in our neighborhood, creating a unique opportunity to work with them to ensure the campus continues to make a positive contribution to the effort to revitalize the East 7th Make it Happen district.

Watch these pages for future updates and look for continued improvements to the East 7th Street business district.

Dayton’s Bluff Maven of Merrymaking

Do you ever wish you had a neighborhood restaurant that you can walk into at any time and find all of your friends there? Maybe you already do, but for one night in March, for neighbors in Dayton’s Bluff, that special place is the Strip Club Meat and Fish restaurant. On the last Monday in March, the restaurant closes its doors to the rest of the world and becomes a strictly Dayton’s Bluff hangout. On March 26, join your neighbors at the third annual Dayton’s Bluff Community Council fundraising dinner.

As one of the few fine dining establishments in Dayton’s Bluff, it’s already a hot spot for neighbors. But because of its reputation for great food and drinks and its gorgeous environs, the restaurant draws patrons from all over the Twin Cities (and beyond). Since its opening more than four years ago, the Strip Club has received accolades too numerous to count. Most recently, it was named by City Pages as one of the most romantic restaurants in the Twin Cities. City Pages also captured its classy and comfortable vibe - “It’s a neighborhood joint that is actually a raucous dinner party full of exquisitely funny flirts.”

For the third year in a row, the restaurant is hosting a five-course dinner with wine pairings as a fundraiser for the Dayton’s Bluff Community Council. This dinner has become a much-anticipated event, and guests often leave eager to sign up for next year.

According to Deanna Foster, Executive Director at the Community Council, this event is just one of the ways that the Council builds community spirit. “One of the special things about this event is that it supports a larger community gathering and dinner in October of each year. We are committed to building a more inclusive agenda that...

Hmong American Partnership Announces
2012 Scholarships for Hmong Students from a Hmong American Partnership press release

Hmong American Partnership is currently inviting applications from students for the 2012 Hmong Scholarship Award competition. This is the 15th year Hmong American Partnership has been able to offer Scholarship Awards. Application deadline: March 2, 2012.

To be eligible, applicants must:
• be Hmong,
• reside in Minnesota, and
• demonstrate financial need.

Awards will be made in March 2012. These scholarship awards are disbursed from the Hmong American Partnership Educational Endowment, established by a generous gift from an anonymous donor whose intent was to help Hmong students in Minnesota attain their educational goals.

The Educational Endowment will provide two types of scholarships this year: Leadership and Non-Traditional Student Scholarships.

Leadership scholarships are given to seniors graduating from high school in 2012 who have demonstrated leadership and scholastic excellence. The student must use the scholarship for direct educational expenses. Each scholarship is a one-time award, which must be used within two years.

Non-Traditional Student scholarships are given to students who have demonstrated leadership potential and scholastic excellence. "Non-traditional" is defined as more than 22 years old, married, OR a single parent. The non-traditional scholarships may be used for any educational-related needs. Students in technical, occupational, and apprenticeship programs are especially encouraged to apply.

The scholarship application form may be downloaded from: http://tinyurl.com/7bbux

For more information about application packages, the scholarship awards, or Hmong American Partnership, please call Kaho Yang at (651) 291-1811, ext 222.

Completed applications must be postmarked by March 2, 2012, or hand delivered to 1075 Arcade Street, St. Paul, MN 55106 by 5:00 p.m. on March 2, 2012.

Nelson Program
Community Partners seeking project applicants from a Nelson Program press release

Have an idea for a neighborhood applied-research project, but need some funding? The Kris Nelson Neighborhood Research Program is inviting proposals for the summer 2012 semester. Please apply online: http://www.cura.umn.edu/CBR or call Program Coordinator Jeff Corn at 612-625-0744.

The deadline for project proposals is March 15, 2012. Approved projects will run from May 28 to August 26, 2012.

The Nelson Program is a consortium of Twin Cities’ colleges, universities, and community organizations that partners with neighborhood and community organizations on applied research projects. Organizations define and direct their research projects, and NPCR recruits and funds research assistance for the project.

A neighborhood staff person said, “The program is one of the best examples of collaboration between academia and the broader community. We’ve been able to get... good information that we wouldn’t have been able to get on our own. Staff is too busy, they can't pull away to do focused research. It's been a huge help for us. It's... a marriage made in heaven.”

More information on the program is available at http://www.cura.umn.edu/Nelson-Program.

Dayton’s Bluff Early Childhood Family Education Celebrates 25th Anniversary Plant Sale

by Christine Driscoll, Dayton’s Bluff Advisory Board Member

The Dayton’s Bluff E.C.F.E. Advisory Council is hosting its 25th Annual Plant Sale. A variety of plants are available from ornamentals to vegetables to hanging baskets. Plant pick up is held the Friday before Mother’s Day, just in time for local planting of Mother’s Day gifts.

All proceeds support Dayton’s Bluff E.C.F.E. programming which this year includes purchasing equipment for the classrooms, educational speakers, and field trips to the Children’s Museum, a local apple orchard, and Dodge Nature Center & Farm.

Browse for plants and order online at http://www.ecfedaytonsbluffplant-sale.org or call us at 651-293-5343 if you would like an order form mailed to you. Orders are due by Friday, March 30. Plants will be picked up at the Dayton’s Bluff Recreation Center gymnasium at 800 Conway Street on Fri- day, May 11 from 5:00-7:00 p.m.

St. Paul Early Childhood Family Education (E.C.F.E.) offers parent and child education for families with chil- dren between birth and kindergarten age. One defining feature of E.C.F.E. is that it includes a focused educational component for the parent as well as the child. During parent time, licensed educators lead parents through discussions intended to improve parenting skills, while children are involved in age-appropriate activities with an early childhood teacher.

E.C.F.E. is based on the idea that the family provides a child’s first learning environment and that parents are a child’s first and most significant teachers. E.C.F.E. gives parents valuable information about their child’s development, describes the early childhood curriculum, and offers skills that describe as the most important they will ever have—being a parent. At the same time, parents develop strong social connections which in turn strengthen the community.

Dayton’s Bluff E.C.F.E. classes are held at Dayton’s Bluff Elementary School located at 800 Conway Street. Classes are held in the morning, afternoon, and evening, including two for Spanish speakers. Limited transportation is available for some classes. If you would like to enroll in a Dayton’s Bluff E.C.F.E. class please call 651-293-5343.

Learn about your neighbors; attend the Bridging Cultural Understanding series at Metro State

This school year, Metropolitan State University is presenting a series of intro- ductions to various cultural communities. Each session will cover a brief history of that month’s selected culture, as well as information about traditions, names, identity, communication, family structures, belief systems, and health.

On March 28, learn about the Karen Community on April 11, the LGBTQ Community. The events are from 11:30 a.m.-1:00 p.m. These events are free and open to the public; light refreshments or dessert will be provided. No RSVP required; call 651-793-1542 for more information.

Free tax and FAFSA help

Get tax help at Metropolitan State Library University & Learning Center, co-located with Dayton’s Bluff Lib- rary at 645 East 7th Street. People who qualify for this assistance include working families making less than $41,000 in 2011, people with disabilit- ies, senior citizens, and students. The workshops will be offered March 6 and March 8 from 5:00-7:00 p.m in room 312.

The FAFSA, or Federal Application for Student Federal Aid, helps thou- sands of students get the money they need to attend college or a university. A FAFSA application workshop is being offered at Metropolitan State Uni- versity on March 3, from 10:00 a.m.-12:00 p.m. in library room 329. Questions? Call 651-699-4707.

Small business classes

by Karin DuPaul

The Dayton’s Bluff Neighborhood Microentrepreneur Program is taking ap- plications for the spring class, which will start in May.

The program helps start-up and young businesses; all East Side entrepreneurs are welcome. The Dayton’s Bluff Community Council and the Neighborhood Development Center have been two such hosting microentrepreneur courses each year.

Classroom training lasts ten weeks and includes topics such as operations management, marketing, financial management, how to create a successful busi- ness and how to prepare a business plan. In addition, each student will have eight hours of one-on-one time with the instructor to work on individual busi- ness concepts. Those who successfully complete the course and locate their busi- nesses in target neighborhoods are eligible for ongoing business support services.

The registration fee is based on a sliding scale. Class size is limited, so don’t wait to apply. For an application, email karin@daytonsbluff.org or call her at 651-772-2075.

Free Kickoff Celebrations across the city or email karin-@daytonsbluff.org call 651-772-2075 before April 10 and she will pick up the supplies for you.

Exploring Arts and Cultures in Dayton’s Bluff
by Jean Comstock
ACO Committee Member

One of the popular subcommittees of the Dayton’s Bluff Community Council is the Arts and Culture Committee. In past years, we’ve organized a wide range of events—book readings, presentations on neighborhood architecture, talks by a local historian on the individuals and businesses who impacted Dayton’s Bluff, gatherings to share stories, photos, information about making home improvements, a recent exhibit of art by local residents in the Council offices, and many more.

This year, we want to extend our activities even further to include more of the many diverse cultures who live, work, and go to school in Dayton’s Bluff. As part of that expansion, we are renaming ourselves the Arts and Culture Committee and revising our general mission statement:

To embrace the diverse heritages of Dayton’s Bluff by showcasing their arts and cultural activities, while making the work of the Community Council more relevant to and involving people of the various cultures of the neighborhood.

Our intent is to both highlight the unique features of and advocate for the different cultures in our neighborhood. An example is the Know Your Rights article on immigrant rights published by the Committee for Immigrant Rights in Minnesota (MIRAc). This article is making available the following information on immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) present in the neighborhood.

Know your rights by the Arts and Cultures Committee, Dayton’s Bluff Community Council

On January 12, neighbors noticed that many agents from Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) present in the neighborhood. City officials have said that the agents were doing training in the neighborhood and have suggested that they should put up signs if they do it again. Because some neighbors were worried, the Dayton’s Bluff Community Council Committee on Arts and Cultures is making available the following information on immigrant rights published by the Committee for Immigrant Rights in Minnesota (MIRAc).

IF YOU ARE CONFRONTED BY THE AUTHORITIES:
Stay silent. Do not say anything, or just say, “I have the right to remain silent, I want to talk to my lawyer.”
Do not open the door. The best protection is to stay inside your home.
Talk to a lawyer. Do not sign anything without talking to a lawyer.
Do not state your nationality. Do not reveal information about your immigration status or say what country you are from.

For more information, call or email MIRAc at 651-389-9174 or miracmn@gmail.com or call the Immigrant Law Center at 1-800-223-1368.

Unannounced police training frightens, angers residents
by Meg Gronau, Forum Editor

Around 2:00 p.m. on January 12, Dayton’s Bluff resident Holly Wardlaw opened her front window for her cat, and saw armed forces—rifles in hand and sidearms strapped to their legs—surrounding and entering a vacant, county-owned home across the street.

Wardlaw caught an officer’s eye; he greeted her and explained that the agents, who came from out-of-state Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), were doing some training. Wardlaw and other neighbors requested some kind of notification—postcards or posted signs—alerting the community about future training sessions.

On February 16, the agents were back—again with no warning or notification for the community, other than a thin band of police tape around two vacant properties.

“I don’t have a problem with their training,” Wardlaw said, “I know that they need to do that, but I do have an issue with doing so in an area and not telling anyone.”

Wardlaw has a good working relationship with law enforcement, and felt secure enough to approach the agents. But many Dayton’s Bluff residents are frightened and intimidated by what appears to be a large-scale enforcement action by uniformed officers.

“What bothers me is the concentration of these kinds of activities along the most distressed blocks in Dayton’s Bluff,” said Sherry Johnson, who has also witnessed such action on Conway Street.

“Isn’t it enough that we have REAL SWAT, FORCE, K-9 raids, shootings, and muggings in our neighborhood?” asked area resident Sage Holben. “So much for quality of life and investing in this block.”

What’s happening?

Conoce tus derechos por el Comité de Artes y Culturas del Consejo Comunitario de Dayton’s Bluff

El 12 de enero, algunos vecinos notaron a muchos agentes del El Servicio de Inmigración y Control de Aduanas (ICE) presentes en el barrio en la Calle 4 y Avenida Bates. Las autoridades municipales confirmaron que los agentes estaban haciendo un entrenamiento en el barrio y sugirieron de que ICE debería poner carteles explicando la acción si lo vuelven a hacer.

Debido a que algunos vecinos estaban preocupados, el Comité de Artes y Culturas del Consejo Comunitario de Dayton’s Bluff hace del conocimiento la siguiente información sobre derechos de los inmigrantes que publicó el Comité por los derechos de los inmigrantes en Minnesota (MIRAc).

QUE HACER FRENTE A LAS AUTORIDADES:
Guarda silencio. No digas nada o solo dí: “Tengo el derecho de guardar silencio, quiero hablar con mi abogado.”

No abras la puerta. La mejor protección es quedarte dentro de tu casa.

Habla con un abogado. No firmes nada sin hablar primero con un abogado.

No digas tu nacionalidad. No reveles información sobre tu estatus migratorio ni digas del país que provienes.

Mounds Park Methodist celebrates 155 years
from a MPUMC press release
Mounds Park United Methodist Church (MPUMC), located at Earl and Euclid Streets will celebrate its 155th birthday on Sunday, October 14. A 10:30 a.m. service will follow by a luncheon at 11:00 a.m. Everyone who has any connection with the congregation, past or present, is invited. The theme for the day is “Proud of our Past...YES, We Have a Future!”

The Rev. Wayne Walther, who grew up with MPUMC, will be a featured speaker at the event. The organist will be Rev. Richard Harper, who also spent his formative years attending MPUMC. The choir will be an active unit in the community. In addition to worship services, Sunday school, and handbell choirs for all ages (directed by Phyllis Carlson and Bob Lucas), the Glorious Grocery Give-away has been an important ministry for many years. Other important ministries are the Hallelujah Harvest celebration on Halloween, the neighborhood night out each summer, Sunday evening family suppers with movies and games, Bible School, Summer Light children's programs (directed by Amy Buck), and Urban C.R.O.S.S. youth community service (directed by Youth Director Eric Buck).

MPUMC's mission statement is “We are a Christ-centered church that is committed to being a church of the neighbor- hood as we reach out to those around us in love and justice with the Good News of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.” MPUMC aims to be a beacon of hope to everyone in the community.

Moving from a “Problem-solving” to an “Asset-connecting” Mindset: Youth
by Sherry Johnson
I've noticed that when neighborhoods start gathering, they seem to start with a “prob- lem-solving” leadership program. In fact, it is a lot of the people who need problems draw us out of our well-guarded private lives. We meet in order to “vent” about problems, and our next step—if there are any action steps taken—is to look to government or sometimes a nonprofit organization to listen to our problems so that they can solve them. As John McKnight likes to say, "We outsource our problems.”

Afterword: If we're lucky; if our little association or block club will organize further, at tempting to create some action steps which they hope a governmental or other organizational body will address. They may have heard about present solutions, then step back and wait for implementation. Sometimes they use phone or email pressures to lobby for movement, and sometime the action plan becomes a casualty of busy private lives. In Minnesota, the Great Killer of Momentum is often our long winter.

Fact is, problems can't be solved by block clubs, the police department, or community councils. The bad landlord or neighbor down the street might finally get shaped up or hipped on the wrong side of the law, but one another will often take her place.

This cycle is exhausting, and I've seen many a neighborhood completely burned out by their efforts to "put out fires.” That’s why I've chosen to leave the problem-solving mentality entirely. It's not what I don’t want to see problems solved; on the contrary, I want to change what I see. Instead of seeing problems, I see assets.

An example: Instead of spending my energy gathering neighborhoods to lobby city officials about bad behaviors and problem properties, I look for ways to mobilize and connect neighborhood as sets—good behaviors and treasured places. The hope is that in focusing on increasing community connection, we'll all feel a lot prouder of what we have; moreover, that pride and involvement will be translated into neighborhood safety and economic growth.

Here are a few examples of connections neighborhods have fostered across the country that have produced positive results (with thanks to John McKnight and the people behind his work.):

- Youth + Local Businesses =
- Schools + Historians + City Council =
- Youth + YMCA =
- Youth + Community Development Corporations =
- Youth = YMCA = Youth are selected by YMCA staff and resident managers of housing develop- ments to participate in a six-month fitness challenge. At the end of the training, the youth will be certified Y fitness leaders. They will structure and operate after school and Saturday night programs for other youths in the都没
- Youth + Community Development Corpora- tion + Police + Parks & Rec =
- The Northwest Side Community Development Corporation in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, organizes a small group of youths to renovate a small park. A police officer helps the youth fund find and assists with writing of the proposal. The youth plans to approach the library for additional funding. The youth plan their work will be the renovation of an abandoned community center at the park in order to make it available for public use.
- Youth + Parks & Rec + Churches =
- At Youth in Action of New York City, youths gain ownership of an empty lot and transform it into chil- dren's park. The project is a community-driven one, with the church facing the park and renovate the basement of the church to create a youth center.
- Schools + Historians + City Council =
- In Prairie Village, Kansas, fifth and sixth graders participate in an innovative educational program that takes them on tours around their neighborhoods to learn about buildings in the process of community planning. Then the students create their own walking tour and slide presentation about the community. When officials of their town proposed raising an old barn to make a parking lot, 90 stu- dents went to City Hall with information about the barn's historical significance to the community.
- Youth + Local Businesses =
- Through the Youth As Resources Project in Milwaukee, Wis- consin, youths contribute to the economic develop- ment of their communities by rehabilitating housing. They’re paid and earn school credit. An industrial council made up of local businesses provides raw materials and offers talks, tours, and job training for the youths. Many of them eventually start their own businesses or are employed by one of the local businesses.
- Youth + Senior Center =
- In Chicago, when latchkey kids are feeling lonely, experiencing a crisis, or just need to chat, they can talk to com- munity elders on the telephone through the “Grandma Please” program.
- Youth + Senior Center + State Government =
- Youth + Senior Center in Chicago are paired with foster children at a neighbor- hood day care center. This partnership is facil- itated by the Illinois Department of Aging.

Adapted from A Thread of Connection, Sherry
Johnson's blog at dbcan.wordpress.com.
“When a young mother bundles up her baby to come out to a meeting on a cold and dark winter evening, I know that she has something important to say.” – Judge Leslie Ott Marek

“We know we’re your only route to justice.” So noted St. Paul City Attorney Kim Bingham when Dayton’s Bluff Community Council hosted an unprecedented event at its monthly community meeting on February 2. Ramsey County District Court Judges Robyn Millenacker and Lezlie Marek, St. Paul East Side FORCE Commander Jill McRae, and Attorney Bingham met with 16 residents of Dayton’s Bluff to talk about residents’ experiences as crime victims in their own neighborhoods. One panel member indicated that such a meeting was unusual and indicated that too often, those who make decisions really do not know the community in which the people most affected live. It was a listening session of respect and support.

Several residents cited break-ins of cars and homes; another of shots fired through a window. One talked movingly of being home during a break-in and feeling powerless in working through the process afterward. Break-ins being much more common than being attacked, I wonder if we accept it as TOO common. After I was attacked and beaten, I was able to fairly quickly work through the report, identification, and attend court proceedings. Assistant City Attorney Anthony Tedesco and the SPPOD proved extremely supportive and responsive in providing resource information, connecting me with reconciliation services, and keeping me updated in court appearances of ‘my’ attacker. As Judge Millenacker stated, “The partnership between and among law enforcement, the courts and the community is vital to forging solutions…your voices were heard and will continue to be at the forefront of my mind, and those of my fellow judges, when we are determining the consequences for those engaging in criminal behavior.”

I consider myself more fortunate a victim than someone who is a victim of a home or car break-in. An attack is close up and personal – direct. The attack on me was a rash decision and not against my ‘secure space.’ I later was able to personally meet with at least one assaulter and ask questions, getting an understanding of the person who committed the crime. For the other two, for a short while, whenever I walked into Phoenix or Rainbow, or passed the bus stop, I wondered if the Black woman and man in front of me were the same who had beaten me. I felt safe, though; safe because I had a community’s support. I felt safe to face my fears and let them pass, to walk past the attacker’s home. I believe having answers and knowing that the police and court process were working together gave me this sense of safety. An unsolved vehicle or home break-in doesn’t offer this same sense of closure or safety. Through her directness in our dialogue, Commander McRae conveyed her understanding of our concerns. I personally believe that our voices were heard at this meeting and our experiences seen as those that affect lives.

It seems appropriate to close with a comment from Judge Marek: “Please know that we listened closely to your stories about how crime in your neighborhood is eroding the sense of safety and peace that every citizen has the right to expect where they live and work and raise their families. The stories made a strong impression on all of us and they will help us to better perform our jobs.”

2012 Dayton’s Bluff Honor Roll announced

St. Paul’s 17 district councils held their annual volunteer awards event on January 20, 2012 at St. Thomas University. The awards recognize people from all over the city who have given outstanding service to the community over a long period of time. In Dayton’s Bluff, the community has added three new members each year since the 1980s. This year’s keynote speaker was Jane McClure, a community newspaper editor and writer who helped reinstate the Dayton’s Bluff District Forum after a short hiatus. Jane gave a short, well-received talk on community organizations throughout the history of St. Paul.

Eric and Amy Buck family

They give freely of all their resources (time, money, love, sweat, etc.). They helped start and staff a program (Urban C.R.O.S.S.) through Mounds Park United Methodist Church, wherein young workers do odd jobs for homeowners in Dayton’s Bluff. They are involved with Dayton’s Bluff Early Childhood Family Education (ECFE), founded the “Reading Rodeos” program (an after school remedial reading curriculum), Boy Scouts, and Mounds Theatre. There are so many more good things that this unassuming family does; they are an inspiration to us all.

June Bennett

June did an outstanding job working with a Dayton’s Bluff family of six who lost everything in a house fire, including organizing a donation drive to help the family. She helps a lot in the Dayton’s Bluff Community Council office. June came to the Community Council through a senior aid program and worked here from 2005 to 2007. We were very lucky to get her back in October 2008 and we hope to keep her until her four year assignment is complete.

Susan Tietjen

Susan operates the Assisted Healing Center at 733 East 7th Street. She was the driving force in re-starting the Dayton’s Bluff Area Business Association, beginning with the flowering pots in front of 7th Street businesses. She served as President for the first year of the reformed association and was a key player in the success of the “Keys to the Community,” an event to help residents learn about businesses in Dayton’s Bluff.

Celebrating Women’s History Month with stories from Dayton’s Bluff history

by Steve Trimble
Forum staff

This may be an appropriate time to look at some of the history that the women of Dayton’s Bluff have made. Why? Because March is Women’s History Month, and it’s a special one. This celebration started as a week in 1981. It was wrapped around an earlier March 8th International Women’s Day. In 1987, Congress passed a resolution expanding the focus to a whole month.

This is the centennial of the original International Women’s Day, so it seemed a great time to link up local events about larger historical movements. An important question concerns who to talk about. One way is to research “women worthies,” which are very successful and may have become highly successful.

However, I feel that everyday women who spent time working in their own families and neighborhoods deserve to be remembered just as much as those who are famous. Here are some of their stories.

Emma “was not one for outward show. She had a best dress, a good dress, and a patched together, making gifts while mother read to us.”

One of her fondest memories of grade school years were the afternoons when they “sewed and crocheted together, making gifts while mother read to us.”

“…did not gloat over her financial acumen, but rather... draw your own conclusions.”

“…did not gloat over her financial acumen, but rather... draw your own conclusions.”

“She was a thorough housekeeper. As a child I can still see her on warmed by the large coal stove.…..

“The vegetable garden... grew well and we relished our fresh vegetables of all varieties, especially asparagus.…. ”

“From her house allowance she saved money and banked it,” he concluded. But they’re aware of it; they see stuff on Facebook. I try to be an example of

“Her will was strong and she drove herself... often to the point of exhaustion.”

“Her will was strong and she drove herself... often to the point of exhaustion.”

“It isn’t a job to me. I would do this for free; don’t tell me that. Yeah, this isn’t a job—this is a calling. Everyday something exciting happens, fire and police departments. Among other things, Emily taught the girls how to make placemats for hospitalized patients, helped them collect dolls for less fortunate children, took them camping, and aided their learning of various skills.

Monte went home to Albert Lea to work in a turkey factory to earn money for college. He often found himself covered in turkey manure from head to toe—Monte needed and wanted something better.

Then there is the life of Maria de Carmen Cervantes, who came to Minnesota along with Mexican farm workers in the 1940s. She lived on the West Side flats until moving to Maria Avenue two decades later. Maria believed that education was a key to advancement. The widowed mother of seven never graduated from high school, but her dream was to see that her children did. They all ended up earning college degrees.

Some Dayton’s Bluff women have left valuable first person accounts of their memories. Marie Willius was part of a prosperous German American family in the 1880s. “A picket fence outlined the property” and “inside of the fence lilac bushes flourished, from the house down the line of the garden, softening the background,” she later wrote.

Those are the stories of four women you might want to think about during Women’s History Month. Their lives were varied, but they all made important, if not always recognized, contributions to our neighborhood. If you have a mother or grandmother who lived in Dayton’s Bluff, why not write about her? You have two months before Mother’s Day, so start writing. Maybe some of them can appear in the May issue of the Forum.
Happy Fanatic
by Stefan Pomrenke

Portland is weird, I know, but it has some amazing ideas.
When I was doing my interviews for my family medicine residency programs, I got to spend about a week with my wife's friends in Portland. Along with sleeping on the couch, I was introduced to their own extreme world of reduce, reuse, and recycle. Each morning we would check the plastic zip lock bags that were washed out the night before and dry on the dish rack. Then we would harvest some of the rain water from their rain barrels and check out the phantom power consumption on their volt meter, all while living in a communal living situation. I had never experienced that. I can safely say that they were happy fanatics about their life style. It was endearing; I wanted more of it.

My residency ended up being in St. Paul and we chose to live in Dayton's Bluff for the charming houses we found, the neighborhood programming, and the fact that I could bicycle or run down the hill to get to work. I started looking around figuring out how we could tap into some of that Portland craziness. I soon found some awesome antique stores, salvage yards and reuse stores that began to fill my needs for furniture and lumber for a large pergola. We created a garden with drip irrigation that is fed by a rain barrel that, along with our Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) from the Community Design Center, we still had not developed livestock! We went on the Twin Cities chicken coop tour (yes, that is a thing) back in 2010 and got our permit and chicks in Spring 2011, set up our own chicken coop in the summer and voila! Six months later, they just laid their first eggs. Quite tasty; I have definitely cut back on eating chicken and other meats, though.

My wife works in North Minneapolis – a bit of a commute – so I decided we should get a veggie car. You have probably seen it pattering around the neighborhood. It is powered by grease: the grease from deep-fryers at restaurants. We get 45 mpg and pay about $2 per gallon for the grease after it has been properly filtered from a co-op. I love the idea of running a car on the stuff that makes us sick. Speaking of co-ops, did you know 2012 is the year of the co-op? A dedicated group is working to bring a food co-op to the East Side.

So, there it is, I have become a happy fanatic. I openly and unabashedly admit it.

Stefan Pomrenke is a Dayton's Bluff Community Council member, family physician, and champion of a new Food Co-op on the East Side.

No Little Thing
by Mark Schwister

It's no little thing. It's bigger than I first thought, going that way, wondering how long to the next stopping place. Falling in love with the train tracks, the metallic glint of the river...it's the same bend, the same view.
Never downstream for too long, easy to get lazy and forget why I'm there. Moving. Bridges. City woods and frost. Houses that dream of being mansions, mansions that tried too hard.

This is no little place where I would stop. Old and ill-respected, perhaps. Forgotten. It creaks. It sleeps at the proper times, and thinks quietly of its past.
I would laugh to see it sleepwalk, shuffling along the Mississippi, draping its historical ephemera around both its grittier and classier cousins, its sleep-breathe carrying whispers of the Burlington Northern and river barges, the sighing of the interstate, the in-betweenes of wooded vales and asphalt, burial mounds and airport, lake water and motor oil.

No little thing, I have discovered. Always moving, wondering about where I will have ended up once I've gotten there. Will it be a good thing to stop, then? To discover places, hide them in my coat pocket, and collect them like a hoard of secrets...the streetlamps and ginkgos, hidden roads and parks, houses that hold their breath, a tiny world left drizzling ice on an age-slated river bluff, scoured by the sky when it surely must be so much closer here -
It's no tiny thing, after all.
Mark Schwister has lived in Dayton's Bluff since 2003.

Happy Belated Birthday!

During the Forum's winter hiatus, we missed an important Dayton's Bluff milestone. Dave Murphy turned 60 on January 8, 2012.

He has been a long time resident of Mounds Park and looks forward to the next 60 years!

Do you know someone with an impending birthday or important event on the horizon? The Forum is ever so happy to accept your submissions for publication at editor@daytonspbff.org.
