Metro Gold Line will impact Earl-Hudson business district

Greg Cosimini
Forum Staff

Design details of the Metro Gold Line Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) project are still to be determined but major decisions have been made as to the route it will follow. In general, the Gold Line will connect the Green Line Light Rail system in downtown St. Paul to Maplewood, Landfall, Oakdale and Woodbury via a nine-mile pair of primarily exclusive bus-only lanes. These lanes will be built on the north side of Interstate 94, outside of the sound wall. There will be 10 new stations on the Gold Line and three park-and-ride lots.

The Gold Line BRT will enter and exit downtown on the Third St. Bridge and then pass through Dayton’s Bluff along Hudson Road. Stations will be located at Mounds Boulevard, Earl St. and Etna St. The connections on each end of Hudson Road are still sketchy but a draft plan for Earl Street and Etna Street has been determined.

An open letter to community members from Dayton’s Bluff Community Council

Jeanelle Foster
Chair, Dayton’s Bluff Community Council

Greetings from your Dayton’s Bluff Community Council (DBCC), we hope that the New Year has brought you joy, love, and peace.

We welcome the New Year and the opportunities it brings. The council is embracing this transition to better serve the community and its partners. We are assembling our resources to be more responsive to community needs and taking advantage of this time to engage the neighborhood in conversations. Come be a part of these round table discussions on January 26, February 9, and February 23, from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., at the Earl-Hudson Enterprise Center, 804 Margaret Street.

I wanted to take this opportunity to make a few comments about allegations, information, and future developments happening at the District Council. We have received a variety of comments, questions, and opinions relating to the actions of our executive director and the board of directors. The response by the community has been the cause of much discussion, some anger, as well as questioning. Many of you have been to a board meeting, watched a streamed video and/or attended one or more of the recent community round tables.

First, we would like to personally acknowledge and apologize for the degree of anger, distress, and mistrust this incident has caused the community; we are working to answer questions and rebuild trust. We would also like to acknowledge that the work the Board is doing is responsible in maintaining programming, building positive partnerships, and including community voices as we move forward.

Second, Dayton’s Bluff is a unique and diverse community; you expect us to respond to a wide variety of situations with thoughtfulness, compassion, respect, and empathy in an equitable way. We want to assure you that every member of our board seeks to achieve these goals.

We must also acknowledge that we are working as fast as possible, as volunteers, to ensure updated and accurate information goes out to community in a variety of ways.

Third, the DBCC has an executive director as of Friday, December 22, 2017. Contrary to rumors; the District Council has not engaged in work with our previous executive director since this date. She has visited our office after our separation to remove personal possessions and return materials; all with a Board member in attendance. We are forming interim and regular executive director search committees. If you are interested in serving on these searches please feel free to contact me.

We ask for your cooperation in working to maintain and grow our council and our community. We urge you, as new information comes forth, to please reach out to the council to verify the accuracy and validity of the information you are receiving. There have been many false and misleading allegations. We have worked, and continue to work, to maintain normalcy, seek the truth, and move forward.

The DBCC is not perfect and will always be able to learn and improve the way we operate and work for and with the community.

For this to occur, we need you, our community, to let us know how you feel. Please call, email, or stop by to talk to us about this incident and any other concerns and/or ideas you have for the Board.

Ramsey County Public Health seeks community input on what influences health and well-being. Chris Burns Ramsey County Public Health Ramsey County Public Health wants to know what Ramsey County residents think affects their health and well-being. The department is seeking community input through a short online survey available at: www.ramseycounty.us/chia. “We want to hear directly from residents about the things they see as being important to helping individu­als, families, and communities stay healthy,” said Anne Barry, Ramsey County Public Health Director. “We also want to learn what residents see as getting in the way of their health and well-being.” Insights provided through the survey, along with data from more than 150 health indicators the depart­ment’s research team use to create the county’s current community Health Assessment – an analysis public health produces every five years which guides planning on health issues throughout the county. “We have a lot of assets available on health in our community, but the most important data to us are the lived experiences of our residents and what they see as helping or hurting their health and well-being,” said Barry. “Getting residents input is crucial in making sure we identify and understand community needs and to focus the work we do with our partners in improving health and reducing health disparities.” In addition to the online survey, Public Health is also doing in-person surveys at multiple community sites and gatherings. Survey results will be included in the Community Health Assessment which will be available online later this year. Residents can sign-up at www.ramseycounty.us/chia to receive email notifica­tion when the survey results and the Community Health Assessment are available. The assessment will be a guiding document as Public Health works with community partners to develop a new Community Health Improvement Plan, and the department de­velops strategic interventions. “Our past experience is the data and analysis in our Community Health Assessment have also been widely used by city and county staff and policymakers, schools, nonprofits, and other community partners to develop a new Community Health Improvement Plan, and the department de­velops strategic interventions.” Weekly group for parents with a son or daughter battling addiction offers hope through education and support Robyn Koger Kidd Parents of Addicted Loved Ones A new support group is starting in our community at the Mounds Park United Methodist Church, 1049 Eu­clid Street (corner of Earl Street and Euclid Street) meeting each Tuesday, from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. The group is open to parents of any faith or background who have a child struggling with addiction. According to recent research cited by the National Institute for Drug Abuse, opioid/heroin deaths now exceed annual deaths from car crashes. An article in the New York Times notes, “The rising death rates for those young white adults, ages 25 to 34, make them the first generation since the Vietnam War years of the mid-1960s to experience higher death rates in early adulthood than the generation that preceded it,” directly tying this rise to drug overdoses. Also, former President Obama in February, 2016, requested $1.5 billion in spending to combat the issue of opioid/heroin abuse alone, noting it is an issue in every country. And as is commonly reported, the vast majority of those in our prisons are there in connection with drug or drug relat­ed offenses. Years of working as a substance abuse counselor taught Mike Speakman that overcoming addiction isn’t just about treatment for the individual; it takes support from the family as well. “A good example is diabetes,” Speakman said. “You didn’t cause it, but if your child asks if you want to learn about it so you could help better.” Each PAL (Parents of Addicted Loved Ones) meet­ting, which is designed for parents or spouses of loved ones struggling through an addiction, begins with a prayer, followed by introductions. The group is then presented with one of nine lessons; which include “Healthy Help­ing” and “The Four Stages of Growth in Recovery.” After some discussion of the lesson, the members of the group give an update about what’s go­ing on in their lives and then the meeting ends with prayers. The group is designed for each individual to learn at their own pace. The challenge is that much of the education goes against natural parenting instincts. Speakman had been offering education for families in single weekend workshops for many years though eventually realized the change that needs to occur for drug and alcohol addiction is a long-term change for the entire family. They may learn a lot over a weekend, but repetition and consistency is what will cause the change. Interestingly, although PAL’s focus is on help­ing the family members, it indirectly seems to help their loved one. Mike notes what he began to see was that, “When the parents got help and started making changes in how they deal with their sons and daughters, I saw the addicted loved ones eventually seeking help.” That’s why he began the PAL group. Mike is also the author of The Four Seasons of Recovery; for Parents of Alcoholics and Addicts. The first meeting took place in July of 2006, at the Calvary Addiction Recovery Center, and has since spread across the state. The Mounds Park PAL also expanded out of Arizona and currently has meetings in California, Kentucky, Indiana, Montana, Ohio, Oregon, and Washington. The PAL group in Ramsey County, along with another in Rochester, is one of the first two in Minnesota. Jerry Law, a certified interventionist, says it’s impor­tant for parents or spouses to find a support group like PAL so that they don’t feel so alone. “It’s critical,” he said. “It’s the only way to survive. You feel like, ‘What did I do wrong?’ You didn’t do anything wrong – this is reality.” You can learn more about PAL online at PAL­Group.org.

Urgent request for volunteers at East Side Learning Center: close the achievement gap Lauren Johnsen East Side Learning Center Did you know that children who don’t read at grade level by third grade are four times less likely to graduate high school and only about 36 percent of third graders meet their standardized reading tests in Saint Paul? Our children urgently need you to partner with East Side Learning Center (ESLC) to close the achievement gap. By providing one-on-one literacy tutoring to PreK-3rd grade children who read below grade level, you will build caring relationships and give children the support they need to see themselves as learners and help them imagine a world where all children discover the pride and joy of reading at grade level by third grade? This is ESLC’s vision. As a volunteer tutor at ESLC you will be trained to provide les­sions on a one-to-one basis. Each child’s needs daily by licensed teachers to ensure our children’s reading skills improve—one book, one hour, one les­son at a time. For more information visit­ our website at esclmn.org, call 651-793-2331 or email esclmn@gmail.com.

East Side Learning Center, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, provides one-on-one liter­acy tutoring to more than 320 children four times per week for 30-45 minutes. To date, more than 2,400 students have participated in ESLC tutoring. The mission of unlocking each child’s potential through the foundation of reading is supported by members of the commu­nity, private and corporate foundations, and the School Sisters of Notre Dame (SSND), as well as staff and volunteers at East Side Learning Center. We will be asking elementary school teachers to ensure our most at­risk children receive early literacy inter­vention— at no cost to their families.

Dayton’s Bluff Welcomes the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis

Mark Gallagher
Associate Editor

The Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis has had a long, rich history of serving the Catholic faithful since about 1850. It was originally started as the Diocese of St. Paul but was renamed the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis in 1966 to reflect the growth of the Catholic Church in the region.

On Valentine’s Day 2016, the administrative offices of the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis moved into a building that had previously been the 3M headquarters at 777 Forest Street in Dayton’s Bluff. Roughly 130 employees had been separated into three buildings for a little over 50 years on Cathedral Hill.

“One of the great things with this new building is that we were able to bring our whole staff under one roof,” said Archbishop Hebda, the leader of the Archdiocese of St. Paul and Minneapolis. “There are a lot more synergies here, and there are a lot more interactions here, as well, and we have been able to make this building a hub for some of the Catholic life.

Now that we’re in this building, one of the great blessings is that we have a wonderful hall in the basement that enables us to bring in 100 to 130 people for meetings. So if you come here on Saturday, for example, the building is filled with Spanish speakers preparing for leadership roles in the diocese — so it is wonderful that we have this facility that enables that experience.”

The Archdiocese’s decision to move was precipitated by their petition for bankruptcy, and part of that process is the sale of assets that are no longer necessary. The building is being used very efficiently, so when they moved into Dayton’s Bluff, the Archdiocese was able to designate a more suitable use for its new space.

“Father Norris is the Pastor at Sacred Heart. We are in his parish, and he has been very gracious to us. On the other side, there is St. Casimir’s. We can see the spires of their church, and at Christmas and Easter, they sent us wonderful Polish treats, so it’s been nice to be with them. They are both dynamic communities!”

“The Catholics in Dayton’s Bluff have been very cooperative and welcoming to us,” Archbishop Hebda said. “Father Norris is the Pastor at Sacred Heart. We are in his parish, and he has been very gracious to us. On the other side, there is St. Casimir’s. We can see the spires of their church, and at Christmas and Easter, they sent us wonderful Polish treats, so it’s been nice to be with them. They are both dynamic communities!”

“The Catholic Church in the region.

Moving from Cathedral Hill to Dayton’s Bluff has brought changes that seem to fit well with the Archdiocese. With the entire staff in the same building, communication among departments is stronger because the memo, email, or Post-It note is not just sent to another window, but I was thinking, if we did National Night Out there, I don’t think we would have Hmong, Latino, African Americans, old time East Siders, and just the diversity that is in this neighborhood, which I think is reflective of the Church.”

“The opportunity to be in contact with a larger group of people and gives us a great appreciation of the multi-cultural dimension of not only the community but our own church.”

Holidaze at The Cambric
Judy Yaeger Jones & Bob Jones
Special to the Forum

For the majority of the 113 residents, 2017 was our first full year living in Dominium senior housing at The Cambric. We’ve begun to know one another and to make new friends. And, taking part in group activities: art classes, book group, knit/crochet, pharmac (don’t ask!), cribbage, poker, and other card games...meeting many social needs. There has been much turmoil and dissatisfaction with management policies and practices, sometimes aired in The Forum pages and area blogs: break-ins, thefts, and, inappropriate tenants and dogs. Frequent building maintenance problems have eased, but computer programmed mechanisms remain problematic.

We are learning the essentials of community living: trusting differences, caring for others’ needs, and trying to mind our own business (not easy when we each know so much). We are, hopefully, on the way to becoming an asset of the lower Dayton’s Bluff community. However, the last few months have found us too often on our own, as the regular management office was frequently closed. Resident manager vacations, absences, extra duties at one of the other three Dominium under-construction properties, signing up new tenants, and giving tours. Tenant issues often foster when two and three days go by with no resolution. We have no security guards, but lots and lots of security cameras, and each other! One tenant, Junior, meets the newspaper carrier, often makes the coffee, and sand and cleans the walkways. Nights and weekends mean emergency maintenance only. One tenant without heat had to wait for four hours for emergency maintenance to respond. Erika, our initial building manager, is moving on to another property. We met our new manager, Jessica, at the ‘Ugly Sweater & Cookie Exchange.’ We hope she’s a great communicator with our 50-90 seniors! On December 21, Cambric held a ‘Mrs. Claus Holiday Mystery Gift Exchange’ with games and prizes. Resident musicians, Marcia on guitar and Shirley on flute, inspired a feast of food donated by Erika, The Cambric, and tenants (we do have amazing cooks!). We are so appreciative of local merchants and organizations for the wealth of donated gift cards. Thanks to Mississippi Market, Swede Hollow Cafe, Morelli’s, Carabones, Davanni’s, Target, Holiday Stations, Cub Foods (Sun Ray and Arcade locations), Little Oven, Magnolia’s, and Culvers (a year’s supply of ice cream). Residents Bob Jones and Judy Yaeger Jones organized the event with great support from neighbors, including Friends of Swede Hollow. The biggest problem was too many sharp, smart seniors nearly acing the Mrs. Claus Quiz. How many Forum readers know ‘La Befana’ is the female gift giver? She and a few other stumpers did prevail. Origin of candy canes, anyone? Finally, we were all gifted with Dominium with a ribbon-adorned gift. (see above photo) Words fail us. Wishing you a peaceful New Year!

Richard Arlen: Neighborhood movie idol

Richard Arlen, a former Dayton’s Bluff resident, was inducted into the Hollywood Hall of Fame in 1960 and his star can be found at 6753 Hollywood Blvd., but a few in our neighborhood know his story. So who was this actor? Around fifteen years ago I did write about Arlen in the Forum, but when researching for an article on Central High, I found out more information about his time in St. Paul so it seemed a good idea to share his story again.

Like many Hollywood figures, he took on an assumed name. He was born Sylvanus Mattimore, the youngest of five children of James and Mary. His friends called him Van. In 1899 the family address was 872 Hastings Avenue (now Hudson Road) somewhat prosperous. James was a claim agent for the streetcar company and later became an attorney.

Their name sometimes showed up in the social pages of the St. Paul Globe. In 1902, Mrs. Mattimore hosted a meeting of the Century Club at her home. Later that year, the newspaper reported that the Mattimore family had returned to Hastings Avenue after summering in St. Paul. A newspaper reported that the family participated in a gathering at St. John’s Catholic Church in Dayton’s Bluff, so they may have been movement.

After a short time in White Bear, the Mattimores soon returned to St. Paul and established Central High School. But his education was put aside before graduation. He told an interviewer that “during the first World War… a bunch of us kids wanted to become fliers. The American Air Force wouldn’t take us because we were only 16. But an RAF (Royal Air Force) recruiter came to town and we joined up.”

Arlen served in the Royal Canadian Air Force during WWI, jockeying planes but not directly participating in fighting. When the United States entered the conflict, he was transferred from the French military. He came back to Central after the war to finish his class work. One of his teachers said “I had no way of knowing he would become famous, but I found him a very enjoyable pupil.” She added that he often came to class in his aviation uniform. He graduated with the class of 1919.

After the war, Arlen became a swimming instructor at the St. Paul Athletic Club where he was also on the club’s hockey team. He also worked as a life guard and handyman at Wildwood Amusement Park in White Bear.

In 1921, Arlen ventured West, intending to work in the oil fields, but ended up with a job as a motorcycle messenger at a film laboratory in Hollywood. He crashed into the gates of Paramount Pictures while making a delivery. The studio was impressed by the handsome young stranger and gave him a small contract in 1925. Arlen soon rose to credited roles. His big break came when he was, because of his flying, cast as a pilot in Wings, a silent movie set in Europe during WWI. Arlen had an important role and did his own stunt flying. In 1927, Wings won the first best picture award.

Arlen made the transition to movies with sound in the 1930s, but soon saw his standing in Hollywood slip, so he freelanced at various studios. He was a competent performer and starred in many movies, at his best playing a tough, cynical hero with a dash of humor.

Arlen made several visits to his alma mater over the years. In 1931 and 1939, there were interviews in the school newspaper. He jokingly said “today, as I walked up Central’s front steps, I was early to school for the first time.”

He expressed special regard for two teachers who had “helped him out of many difficulties” and who were both “the sweetest persons alive.” He didn’t get along with all of them. When asked if he studied theater at Central he said “well I joined the dramatic club, but Miss Austin kicked me out.”

Another time when Arlen stopped over on the way to New York, he gave out signatures to a “throng of students” and suggested that they could “do the bit” by going to benefit showings of one of his movies to “combat the local unemployment problem.”

He often returned to home to visit his parents, who had moved to 1854 Goodrich. He always considered this city to be home, once saying “my heart starts beating faster when I get close to St. Paul.” According to one source, he spent several weeks a year with his elderly mother.

For the rest of his life, Arlen continued to get small parts, sometimes on early television, until his death in 1976 from emphysema. He has a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, but unfortunately, has no recognition in his home town. Perhaps someone who reads this article will help start a Richard Arlen Fan Club. Should we have an Arlen film festival at the Historic Mounds Theatre?

East Side Eating – Trimble’s Taste Trek

Forum contributor Steve Trimble has set out to eat at every locally-owned, sit-down restaurant on the East Side. He hopes to get the word out to Dayton’s Bluff about the eating options here on our side of town.

There are more restaurants than there is room for in the monthly paper, but at least 59 may now be found online at daytonbluffdistrictforum.org; click on “East Side Eating” at the top of the home page. Steve Trimble can be reached at daytonbluffdistrictforum@gmail.com.

Ha Tien Market
(651) 340-1321
1959 Suburban Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119
Monday-Sunday: 9:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Now and then people – a daughter, a friend, a neighbor – have accompanied me on the East Side Eating Taste Trek. This time I was joined by Marilyn McGriff, a new resident of the Cambri on East Seventh Street, and noted player of the nyckelharpa, a traditional Swedish stringed instrument, and the author of Caught in the Lye, a Scandi navian cuisine mystery novel set in Minnesota (see photo on page one).

We went to check out the deli offerings at Ha Tien. It is owned by Ne Dao, a Cambodian native, and his husband Son Dao, who emigrated from Vietnam. The couple met after moving to Minnesota. They first took over Son’s parents’ grocery business in 1996, moving it to University Avenue and naming it after Son’s boyhood home.

They wanted to have a larger market and decided to have a second location on the East Side in the empty former Byerlys building. It provided a chance to have a much larger space in which to offer a large selection of non-Asian foods from here and around the world.

Before eating, we strolled through the place. There is everything from duck feet to frosted flakes. There are aisles for Mexican and South American foods and sauces, African foods, Japane se and Korean traditional cuisine, and lots of food that you can find at a Cub store. In the meat aisle you can find the standard poultry and seafood selections as well as carefully wrapped packages of beef skin, chicken feet, and an array of pig innards that are simply labeled “pork inside mix.”

I saw Japanese yams, mako shark fin, Korea pears, piñatas, kimchi, Fafu Mix, French baguettes (in the bakery area), white dragon fruit, and even live catfish.

Then we arrived at the deli which has several sections. One is for the area where they make four kinds of traditional Vietnamese sandwiches called banh mi. Then there is a section for prepared hot food. The selections change from time to time, but on that day we enjoyed fried shrimp, oyster pork rib, steamed shrimp barbec ued chicken, pig’s ears, orange chicken, egg rolls, and fried rice. In another location there is sushi that is made daily.

After we got our food and paid for it at the counter, we walked ahead and took a left into the old Byerlys restaur ant. The room is large and well-lighted with one large multilight system in the center of the ceiling. The walls are not covered and there are two that would seat six or more. The floor is carpeted.

This experience was a little different from most of the sit-down restaurants I have visited. It is similar to a cafeteria where you chose the food and they put it in a container good for either eating in or take out. For most of the time, we were the only people there. I chose sweet and sour chicken, an egg roll, and had a serving of mango juice imported from the Philippines. My friend had stir-fried Phu Lau and an Aloe Vera King drink. I decided that an apple turnover would nicely serve as dessert.

Ha Tien is a very unusual operation as it has something for everyone, as they say. It’s a fun place to visit and find new tastes and a diversity not found in most local stores. “We don’t want to concentrate on one group; we want everybody,” said Son Dao. “We are an international market. We hope we can welcome everybody.”
