Princess Party on the Bluff: Eddybear’s DQ Fundraiser

Temperance Brennan
Special to the Forum

People came from all over to the Dairy Queen at 565 Earl Street to attend a “Princess Party” put on by Tim and Karen Plaisted, the owners and frozen cake decorators of the business.

The royal bash was held on August 11, to raise funds to help with the medical expenses of their granddaughter, Edleigh Plaisted, a baby who has already had three operations for a heart condition and was going to have another one soon.

There were specials on food and ice cream, and ticket holders could get a hot dog and drink for only $2. As a forensic scientist, I passed on the processed meat and had a root beer but my partner, Seeley Booth, got the dog with everything on it.

Many children were able to take a picture with Princesses Anna and Elsa, in a tent decorated to look like a castle. Guests enjoyed playing games and having their faces painted as well. The St. Paul Police mounted patrol showed up and children got to watch and/or pet three horses. Local legend Tracy “The Mail Carrier” provided security and helped the many cars maneuver safely on the street surrounding the festivities.

A crew from KARE 11 television spent time covering the event. The highlight of the day had to be when, as promised, Karen “The Singing Grand-ma” of guest of honor, Edleigh, got up on the roof of her building in festive costume and serenaded the crowd with tunes ranging from the National Anthem to melodies from Frozen and other Disney movies.

“Watch the Glow” of the setting sun on the Red Brick Brewery

Karin DuPaul
Forum Staff

The annual “Watch the Glow” of the setting sun on the Red Brick Brewery event hosted by Friends of Swede Hollow (FOSH) each year will start at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, September 21. Everyone is welcome to attend. Meet at the Henge in Lower Swede Hollow Park, near the Drewry Lane and Beaumont entrance.

Witness the sunset firsthand, and back in the bright glow of the brewery building. After the sun sets, the evening cookout begins and socializing continues. Former Swede Hollow residents and Hamm’s employees are invited to share memories of the “good old days” of living in the Hollow and working at the brewery. It is a great way to meet some interesting people and visit Swede Hollow Park.

FOSH is a nonprofit organization that works on Swede Hollow issues, plantings, cleanups, education, history tours, and events including Art in the Hollow, etc. For more information or to volunteer please email karindupaul@comcast.net or call 651-776-0550.

Pictured above are some of the youth workers at the newly-opened St. Paul Cookie Cart. The nonprofit group provides work training, skill development, and leadership workshops. They’re located at 946 Payne Avenue. You can stop by for a visit or to buy freshly-baked cookies Monday-Friday, from 10:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. – but get your fix then, because they’re closed on Saturdays and Sundays, and a weekend without cookies is no weekend at all.

Tourist or resident, explore Saint Paul with a walking tour

_Krissy Schoenfelder_
Landmark Center

Visitors and curious residents are invited to explore Rice Park, St. Peter Street, or Saint Paul’s riverfront with Landmark Center’s Saint Paul Walking Tours – now through September. Landmark Center tour guides will lead three different walking tours of Saint Paul. Tours are free and operate on a rotating schedule, Wednesdays at 1:00 p.m.

“Walking tours are nice events for both visitors and residents,” said Bob Wagner, a Landmark Center volunteer and creator of the walking tours. “People tend to take their hometowns for granted, but there’s always something new to learn, whether you’re a lifelong resident or a tourist.”

The second Wednesday of each month, the Rice Park Tour departs from Landmark Center’s Visitor Information Desk. The tour circles one of Saint Paul’s most iconic parks and stops in the surrounding buildings which give the park its central role in city events and celebrations.

On the third Wednesday of each month, the Heart of the City Tour departs from inside Landmark Center’s North Lobby (6th Street entrance). It travels down St. Peter Street pointing out some of the most famous landmarks and influential buildings in St. Paul’s history, including the Hamm Building and Mickey’s Dinner.

Finally, the Great River Tour begins at Upper Landing Park (Shepard Road and Eagle Parkway) and walks along the mighty Mississippi. It highlights buildings and locations that helped make Saint Paul the city it is today. This tour runs the fourth Wednesday of each month.

All tours are FREE, operate June through September, and begin at 10:00 a.m. Space is limited and reservations are required. For more information or to make a reservation, please call 651.292.3063 or visit www.landmarkcenter.org/visit/walk ingtours.html.

About Landmark Center: Landmark Center is a dynamic, historic cultural center and central gathering place in downtown Saint Paul. It is owned and sponsored by Ramsey County and managed by Minnesota Landmarks, the nonprofit programming and management agency for the building. Do you know that you live in a Historic District?
Casie Radford & Aron Thomas Special to the Forum

A Heritage Preservation District in Saint Paul is a neighborhood area that is recognized for its local significance (for architecture, association with a significant person, location of a significant event, or contributing to the development of Saint Paul) and created to preserve and maintain the historic character of the neighborhood. Local designation does not prevent change, but provides guidance for appropriate exterior alterations and improvements. Benefits include: recognition; access to preservation staff; property value increases; protection of your building; and potential funding opportunities for income-producing properties. There are nine heritage preservation districts in Saint Paul and 75 individually-listed local landmarks.

The City's Heritage Preservation Ordinance (municipal code chapter 73) regulates to protect heritage sites and districts to foster civic pride, enhance the city’s attraction to visitors; promote historic sites or districts for education, stimulation, and welfare of the residents; promote good urban design; and encourage ownership and continued use of historic buildings or sites. Buildings located within a heritage preservation district or individually, locally-listed require review of the Heritage Preservation staff and the Heritage Preservation Commission (HPC) for any exterior work. There are some instances where nationally designated buildings also require review of HPC staff and/or commission. Local district guidelines for exterior work are based on the Secretary of the Interior’s Standards for Rehabilitation. Local Guidelines: https://www.stpaul.gov/DocumentCenter/View/2/15226.pdf

You can determine if your house is located within the Dayton’s Bluff Heritage Preservation District by doing a quick Google image search for “Dayton’s Bluff Historic District.” A map will appear where you can see the perimeters of the district and images of the neighborhood's buildings. Though many are not particularly unique, they reflect the working class style, finish, scale and setting.

The Dayton’s Bluff Historic Preservation District was created in 1992 and encompasses a large area of the East Side from Mounds Blvd/Hudson Road to Maple Street, Eichenwald Street, Hope Street and across East 7th Street to capture the Swede Hollow neighborhood. Within the district, there are both contributing and non-contributing structures and a mix of commercial and residential - properties. Contact HPC staff to find out more about your property’s contributing status (meaning that it has specific qualities that are particularly character-defining, or representative of the greater district).

Our family was small when we moved to Dayton’s Bluff. We looked at over 80 houses across Saint Paul before choosing a small 1-1/2 story on the near east side with a double lot, one block from I-94, just two miles from our former Summit University apartment. What helped sell us was that it was in a historic district. Our cat made the move, and quickly staked her claim under the dining table. There was more space and a yard. We removed the carpet and painted all the rooms prior to fully moving in.

Many people are discouraged by historic districts and see them as a hindrance to development, but it’s not a bad thing to be part of a historic district. On the contrary, a historic designation can mean, rather, that development will happen within the context of historic fabric and the character of your neighborhood will be preserved for generations to come. Windows and exterior finishes and features must meet the guidelines and standards. Benefits include: recognition; access to preservation staff; property value increases; protection of your building; and potential funding opportunities for income-producing properties. There’s a plethora of local resources hidden in each historic district (architects, specialists contractors and tradesmen, historians, etc.)

People don’t buy old houses just because they smell a particular way, though our basement and garage both remind me of something from my youth, the smell that hits me when I first enter the room, or raise the door. I suppose that’s part of what’s great about an old house. They’re like old shirts, comfortable, though worn. But also, it’s the way that a garage can look out of place in spite of looking also like it’s always been there. Porches seem lived in, living rooms cozy. Somewhere structures within an established neighborhood just seem like they belong there and form a community. These old neighborhoods seem to form a link with a past that precedes us, and connect us to something much larger, and more important.

Perhaps it’s nostalgia, or a sense of commitment to honoring a past I lost nothing to do with, but I feel a personal sense of obligation in recognizing our house’s 100th birthday. That it can contribute to a historic district serves as something of an honor to me. No, we don’t look forward to abating the lead painted siding; yes, we look forward to removing our aluminum siding though. The beauty of an old house is that it’s old.
East Side Eating – Trimble’s Taste Trek

In 2015, Forum columnist Steve Trimble set out to eat at every locally-owned, sit-down restaurant on the East Side (all 59 of them). Recently, he has been visiting restaurants that slid since then. All of Steve’s reviews can be found at daytonsbuffetdistrictforum.org under the “East Side Eating” tab.

Mr. Pete’s
(651) 444-8308
821 Maryland Ave
St. Paul, MN 55106

Mr. Pete’s is the last place I needing to visit that had been among the original Taste Trek in 2015. For those of you who read this column, don’t worry - there are at least two or three East Side establishments that will soon be opening, so I will keep on trekking.

I drove up Arcade around 3:00 p.m. on a Sunday, and was wondering where I would be able to park. Happily, I found the lot just north of the restaurant on the right. You can go in the back and get through into the restaurant.

It is not very large, but there are five large purple booths that could seat up to six people. Additionally, there are two tables that would be all right for four-five folks.

My impression is that most people are ordering takeout, since several did that while I was there. There were two other people eating in. Maybe there are more people who sit down at night.

One wall was decorated with colorful renderings of the various foods on the menu and an image saying “Welcome to the Neighborhood.” There is a flat screen TV, but it was not on at the time.

On their logo, along with the name, it says, “pizza, pasta, wings, grill.” These seem to be their specialties. Let’s start out with the first name on the logo: pizza. Offerings include “Build Your Own” pizza, Hawaiian pizza, BBQ chicken pizza, meat lovers pizza, Buffalo chicken pizza, and Chicago style Italian beef pizza. Several of their dishes make references to the Windy City.

Or to the pastas. There are six of them including baked lasagna, alfredo shrimp, chicken Parmesan, and spaghetti. Now the wings: featuring bone-in wings, boneless wings, and Chicago whole wings. From the Grill come burgers such as the Maxwell Street burger (a market area in Chicago), spicy Baja, gyro burger, and BBQ bacon burger. There are also hot dogs, a Chicago Dog, and a Maxwell Street Polish. There are a few seafood entrees - catfish, tilapia, and jumbo shrimp.

There are appetizers, or “sides” as they refer to them, including mozzarella cheese sticks, waffle fries, okra, and breaded mushrooms.

There are quite a few sandwiches from which to choose. Here’s a few of them: Philly cheese steak, Philly cheese chicken, Reuben, pastrami, and meatball, and there is also a burrito.

The three salads on the menu are a garden salad, Asian sesame salad, and a Greek salad. The kid’s menu includes pizza puffs, chicken tenders, cheese sticks, and a ½ pound kids burger.

Someone told me that the restaurant was owned by the same man who started Pappy’s at Maryland and White Bear Avenues. I’m not sure if that is a fact, but the two have some similarities - both in the menu and the homage to Chicago. Mr. Pete’s has a vintage poster of a Chicago bank that features Mayors Richard Daley, Jane Byrne, and Harold Washington (the city’s first African-American) on the wall.

On another there is an ad that says “You Know You’re in Chicago If” that features the classic Viennese Beef hot dog. Not to mention two old photos of Chicago’s Wrigley Field and legendary Cubs’ baseball slugger, Sammy Sosa. Pappy’s also has a lot of sports and other kinds of Chicago memorabilia. And, of course, they both have some foods named after Chicago or Maxwell Street.

The Story of Connemara Patch

Steve Trimble Forum Historian

A lot has been written about Swee Hollow and the waves of immigrants who were sheltered in homes along Phalen Creek. But another community on the border of Dayton’s Bluff has a little-known history of other immigrants who lived along a different section of the same waters. It was known as Connemara Patch.

The name came from the fact that most of its earliest residents were from the Connemara region of Ireland. They had been persuaded to come to Minnesota in the 1880s by Archbishop John Ireland and were initially located on farms in the west-central part of the state. For a variety of reasons, the experiment was a failure and many of the settlers came to St. Paul and settled along the banks of Phalen Creek south of the Seventh Street Bridge.

Some of the newspaper notices described the area in negative terms. In April 1891, one reported “in that most gruesome spot known as Connemara patch...the most severe acrid incident...by which a number of the wretched dwellers in the miserable shanties were injured. The hogs are situated in sheer descent from Commercial Street.”

But some descriptions were far less judgmental and negative. A decade later, the St. Paul Dispatch newspaper had a lengthy article describing the community. Its heading read “St. Paul’s Most Unique Settlement.” It was written by a reporter who visited there on a balmy March day. He walked out on Robert and went east on Fifth Street, crossed a bridge and there found the residences of “quaint Irish families” at the “Foot of Dayton’s Bluff.” The article is one of the few extensive descriptions of the area known as Connemara Patch. You can look the article up on the Library of Congress web page by finding the March 16, 1902, issue of the St. Paul Globe and read the full article with photos on page 20.

The reporter stated that there were irregular streets with small homes and that he saw children in “tattered clothes” playing happily in the mud around due to the recent rains. The children “were happily playing in the sunshine,” wearing “tattered clothes.” He thought that the “children were very happy and were playing ‘ring around a rosie’ as happily as their little sisters up on the aristocratic avenue.” He also said the people there retained many of their own Irish customs and that five of them live in one house and one “makes the exquisite Irish point lace that is the delight of the fashionable world.”

He spoke to several of the inhabitants, many of them working on the railroads, and learned the Connemara history from one man with “a brogue so rich that at times it was difficult to catch his meaning at all.” Not all of the residents were Irish. One of them was an old Swedish man that lived among his Connemara neighbors in harmony.

But a few years later, the tranquility of the neighborhood was upset. In the fall of 1908, there was an article in the St. Paul Dispatch that told of plans for expansion of the railroad tracks that would eliminate much of the settlement. It announced that the “cottages and shanties” between the Sixth Street bridge and the East Seventh bridge were soon to “be wiped out.” The paper said that even though its inhabitants were without great financial means, their location had a redeeming aspect. “Nature has not dealt unhappily in selecting a home for the squatters and the large trees which extend their tops nearly to the level of the street above offer considerable shade in the summer season and in a measure hide from the upper world the poverty that is everywhere in evidence.”

The Story of Connemara Patch, as published in a 1908 issue of the St. Paul Dispatch.

The article ended with the following conclusion: “But what appears in this instance to be the blighting hand of progress has pointed its finger at this little community and has claimed the land on which the homes are situated,” the Dispatch comment-ed. “The railroads are to force the residents to vacate and make room for extensive improvements. The wats of the little creek will flow through a concrete conduit to the Minnesota River, and all evidence of the community which at one time lived on this lower plain will be taken away.”

Mont, but not all of the homes between 6th and 7th Streets were wiped out as new tracks were laid. However, a small cluster of homes around the Third Street Bridge and along Commercial Street, some of them until the 1950s. By then, Mexican-Americans had become the predominant population in the remnants of the old Irish settlement. A few, like Rick Cardenas, can tell you about their community as he grew up. There is one known remnant of the historic Connemara Patch. You can find it at a not-too-distant location at 671 Conway, where it was moved around 1881.
