Swede Hollow Café Has a New Owner

Mark Gallagher
Associate Editor

Swede Hollow Café, founded in 1997 and located in the historic Shutzman building at 725 East 7th Street, was acquired by a partnership of three people in the early part of July 2020. Shirley Yang, who had worked there for about 20 years, her sister Mary, and Mary’s husband, Tou, purchased the coffee shop from the previous owners, Ruth and John Campbell.

Yang was hired by Wes Linstrom, who purchased the coffee shop from the original owners, Sandy and Carol, and then sold it to Ruth and John Campbell. Wes hired Yang as a baker, and as she said, “I would have to say that coffee cake was very popular when I first started; I just can’t make enough of it. Personally, for me, I like to make different types of coffee cake. I try to make them seasonal, and now we are doing strawberry and rhubarb. I usually make three coffee cakes a day.”

She worked her way up to be the kitchen manager. “The duties of the kitchen manager,” Yang said, “are to make sure everybody is following the Department of Health food safety guidelines, to make sure everything is right, manage staff, create specials, create recipes, and deal with things that happen in the kitchen.

“To tell you the truth, it has changed a lot with COVID. Since I started here, the number of staff we have has gone up and down, but with COVID, now I’m down to one barista and one back in the house (kitchen). I have a lot of part-time people, volunteers, and family members helping out with getting the food and stuff like that. If we get busy, there are also people I can call to come and help us, like my brother and sister. Right now, I am in a partnership with my sister and my brother-in-law, Tou. He used to work here at the Swede Hollow Café taking care of the main sandwich line. My sister has helped us out and does other things related to our coffee shop.

“My barista right now is Helen, and she also worked with Ruth as a barista. She is my main barista and works full-time. I have family members who volunteer and help out as needed. My brother helps out sometimes, and there are some part-timers that we can call if we get busy.

On Monday through Friday, the baker opens the shop and starts the caramel rolls/cinnamon rolls, scones, and gets everything set up on a normal business day at about 4 p.m. It’s pretty early, but now with COVID, they open later at 9 a.m. and Yang doesn’t usually get here until 7 a.m., so it has changed a lot. With the COVID crisis, there is limited outdoor seating on the Swede Hollow Café’s patio, and recently the upstairs has opened, but requires a reservation (see below). The café’s hours have been reduced to Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. They are closed on Sunday.

Buying a café had always been a dream of Yang’s, and she thought about buying the Swede Hollow Café for a long time before she bought it. “I’ve done café food for so long,” Yang said, “and I’ve always thought of owning a café. I love it. I love the hours, and I love making quiche and all the other stuff that goes with owning a café. Swede Hollow Café just fell into my lap, so I’m pretty happy that Ruth and John decided to sell it to me. Quiche is really a big seller here, and we sell slices and whole pies too, but usually if people want a whole pie, they have to order it in advance.

“We serve five main sandwiches including turkey cheddar, which is our most popular sandwich. We have turkey Swiss, ham Swiss; cucumber tomato is our vegetarian option, and the toasted four cheese.

“Other regular sandwiches like the roast beef sandwiches, the ham and brie, and the Mediterranean Veggie, we bring back as a special sometimes. The roast beef sandwiches are not on the menu full-time now, but hopefully when we reopen Swede Hollow Café again to normal business hours, we want to bring back our sandwich menu.”

In addition to being one of the three people who own the Swede Hollow Café, Yang owns her own catering company, Shirley’s Catering LLC. See Swede Hollow, page 6

East Side Learning Center

Mission Statement: Unlocking each child’s potential through the foundation of reading. Vision: All children read with pride and joy to become life-long learners.

How ESLC Began: In 1998, as part of a long-range effort to revitalize the East Side of St. Paul, the East Side Neighborhood Development Company approached the School Sisters of Notre Dame about unmet educational needs. In 2001 the Sisters partnered with St. Paul civic and educational leaders to establish the East Side Learning Center, to provide one-on-one reading tutoring for children reading below grade level at no cost to families unable to get help elsewhere.

The program was first piloted at John A. Johnson Achievement Plus Elementary with 25 volunteers, one School Sister of Notre Dame, and 19 children. ESLC has expanded to multiple sites and tutored more than 2,500 children. Now, with the pandemic a serious threat, ESLC has made big changes to safely accommodate students. Literacy Mentors in order to continue the work they do in the community.

All programs will be virtual using an online platform. There have been many innovations for ESLC. In order to support Literacy Mentors, families and the children, resources had to be procured; such as computers, access to the internet, software; complete redevelopment of training for staff and tutors had to be implemented. This also meant many changes regarding those who had been able to tutor and which students would be served. All these changes sent the budget skyrocketing. However, ESLC has been able to rise to the challenge with a wonderful outpouring of support from Literacy Mentors who continue to learn alongside staff and students during this new normal.

The most exciting part of all of this is that once ESLC has developed their new online platform for tutoring, they will be able to expand their reach across the Twin Cities and beyond! The only limit is funding. That is why, this year, ESLC is asking the community for support during Give to the Max Day 2020, which is November 19th.

In addition, ESLC is still looking for AmeriCorps tutors. These tutors earn a small stipend and would need to be over the age of 50 in order to receive the stipend. Folks can give by going online to givemn.org/eslc and donate.

A Matter of Perspective
Turning 80 Here, Now

Carol Sommers
Special to the Forum

I was 24, bouncing on the bumpy roads of an African road in a Peace Corps jeep. And then I was 80 years old. I was 35, relishing my generation’s revolutions, blissfully unaware of the long backlash to come; now I know all about that because I am 80 years old. Middle Age once struck at 35; now it sneaks up on 65-and 75-year-olds. But, no doubt about it, I, 80, am at the very gates of Old Age. Legends of us in Dayton’s Bluff as in the whole country are getting old, not simply older. I for one will not abandon all hope. My message? Getting old is not all bad. We, the old, have time and reason to sort through our things, such as our secret stashes of memory, experience, and serial senses of self. My head is a great file of memories and the history I’ve witnessed. I remember lots of American wars and their attendant politics — World War II, the Cold War, the Korean “conflict,” Vietnam, the Contra “skirmishes,” the Gulf War, the still-raging wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. I took on my parents’ memories of the Great War (I), the Great Flu, the Great Depression. We elders can’t help but wonder at the country we and our non-indigenous settler-ancestors here have made. And wonder is key to vitality in the young and old. Wonder is thinking. There’s too little thinking happening in our society. Wondering opens the gates to the foreign, the unknown, the new, including those scary realms of the Other. It penetrates our own thick walls of certainty, false information, righteousness, and propaganda. With luck, elders have already experienced enough of human nonsense, their own and others’, to know it when they see it. Old age offers perspective. This year, 2020, the cheesy horror movie we’re all watching, and acting or not acting in, may seem like the ending of the world. However, humans, an overrated primate, have been at that brink time and time and time again in history. Elders tend to know this, along with the brittleness, in their bones.

How wise is homo sapiens really? How smart is your smart kid, grand kid, great-grand kid really? Or your phone for that matter? What do we know, think we know, about life, our species, and all our co-species on this planet? Widening perspectives offer bigger, better views.

As a book-hound, now with my welcome old-age swaths of time to read, and with the richly stocked, free St. Paul Public Library at my beck and call (Sun-Ray is open), I have to recommend some books that cut to our chase of perspective. Yuval Noah Harari, a great historian and thinker, has been writing powerful books for our species about our species: Sapiens, A Brief History of Humankind; Homo Deus, A Brief History of Tomorrow; 21 Lessons for the 21st Century—all knockouts being read and acclaimed across the globe. Richard Powers’s The Overstory focuses on the forest and our good friends, trees, in this grand overview of our planet’s intelligence. Our regular old winter lockdown is imminent, as COVID looms in addition, but we can stay home, stay healthy, eat soup, and read. Only after, of course, voting and witnessing, let’s hope, not too harrowing history.

I like a silly poster that I saw recently; it says: “I read books, I drink wine, I know things.” To that I would add “I’m 80” as a conclusion or maybe “because I’m 80” as an explanation.

Do You Want to Build a Skatepark?

Mandy Okonek
Forum Staff

The Eastside Skatepark Taskforce hosted a meet and greet event featuring a skate demo in conjunction with the Payne Avenue Solidarity Street Gallery in October. The vibe was positive and inclusive. I was greeted with the smiling faces of taskforce members eager to share their ideas and garner community feedback and support. Skaters of all ages and their families surrounded the empty lot on the corner of Payne and York to celebrate skateboarding and support local art. The lot was filled with ramps and rails featuring local skate crew Mantecoso, doing their thing, providing a glimpse into a new future for a sad, abandoned parking lot.

There is a lot of space for neighbors to enjoy together. The taskforce has been tracking along with their dream of erecting a skatepark on the Eastside. The park design is forthcoming but aims to include space for quad wheel and roller skaters. The City of Saint Paul has been supportive of their mission thus far, offering up some financial backing with the pending approval of Mayor Melvin Carter. The project would be funded, at least in part, through a STAR grant which offers capital for physical improvement projects within Saint Paul neighborhoods.

Since I attended my first meeting to see what the buzz was all about, the group of forward-thinking east side entrepreneurs have been moving with a dizzying forward momentum. They created a rad logo, printed merchandise, and even have a story-based coloring book Kate Can Skate, written and illustrated by taskforce member Chris Nichols, for sale in support of materializing their pipe dream.

The taskforce members are avid skateboard enthusiasts and truly believe that the east side of Saint Paul would be better off with a skate park. I believe it too. To keep track of the taskforce, follow them on their social media page: facebook.com/eastsideskatepark-taskforce. They gather on a regular basis and meetings are generally open to the public.

East Side Area Business Association

501c3 Foundation Launched to Provide Guidance for Business Community on East Side

Paris Dunning
Executive Director, East Side Area Business Association

Created on September 26, 2020, East Side Area Business Association’s (ESABA) Foundation is poised to increase the capacity of support for the educational programs, connections between members, and information sharing that give our members a community of business allies and peers.

Since the onset of COVID-19 and its impact on businesses and organizations, ESABA has served as a conduit for resources around COVID and has streamlined information from local, State, and Federal programs for its members. ESABA convenes a weekly meeting to rally members around key questions and concerns and keep businesses connected to each other. The new 501c3 foundation will mean that all persons, businesses, and grantors can contribute to this work as a charitable donation. This makes the ESABA foundation eligible for matching grants from companies who offer this benefit for employees/community organizations.

ESABA has been providing guidance and advocacy to the East metro business community since the inception of the Phalen Corridor Initiative in 1990. The initiative has brought more than 2,000 jobs to the East Side. ESABA has promoted the assets and resources of the East Side and created visibility that has helped many businesses get a start and grow. In recent years, ESABA has partnered with many companies to foster the increase of business presence on the East Side and technical assistance support to businesses owned by women and people of color. Companies and organizations like State Farm Insurance, Metro State University, and the Saint Paul Port Authority are among a few of their partners in this work.

Through its collaborative nature, ESABA has partnered with many organizations to provide insight and advocacy for its members. Collaborative partners include, BizRecycling, City of St Paul Departments like Department of Safety and Inspections, Department of Planning and Economic Development, Mayor’s Business Review Council, Ramsey County, Visit Saint Paul, District Councils, African Economic Development Solutions, Asian Economic Development Association, and Latino Economic Development Center to name a few.

You can visit ESABA at www.esaba.org for more information about all the local companies that have stepped up to support and have benefited from the services ESABA has to offer.

Dear East Side Neighbors,

Elections matter!

PLEASE VOTE ON NOVEMBER 3. OR BEFORE.

Did you know that the East Side has about the lowest voter turnout in the State of Minnesota? Did you know that when we don't vote we send a message to our elected leaders that we don't care? And as your city councilmember, I KNOW YOU CARE. I know how busy you are and how demanding life is. But if we stay home this November, we jeopardize our children's and our community's future. Please encourage everyone you know -- your family, your neighbors and your friends to vote on or before November 3.

You can vote on OR BEFORE November 3rd. Ramsey County welcomes you to come to 90 Plato Boulevard -- take East 7th Street to the Lafayette Bridge and go right on Plato Boulevard -- anytime between now and November 2nd between the hours of 8:00 am to 4:30 pm -- to vote early. Or you can vote at your polling place on Tuesday, November 3. Go to MNvotes.org or call (651) 266-2171 to find out where to vote, voting early by mail, or for any other questions you may have!

See you at the polls!

Living and Loving East St. Paul

Clara Martin

Communities differ in a multitude of ways; the important choice for happiness and contentment is to find the community that best fits a way of life that is conducive to individual and family well-being. Sometimes, of course, it takes some time to live in a place before knowing if the community is a good fit. East St. Paul has a lot to offer for anyone seeking a richness in lifestyle that’s unpretentious, friendly, and diverse. Remind yourself of what East St. Paul has to offer by taking an autumn drive through a few of the residential neighborhoods and you will be happy you did. The trees lining many of the boulevards are forming trellises of oak and maple color, children are playing in piles of raked leaves, moms and dads donning flannel shirts and light caps are busily raking, changing screens to storm windows, putting up Halloween decorations, and pulling up everything from their summer gardens to prepare for the onslaught of another Minnesota winter. East St. Paul has its foibles, of course: For instance, many neighborhoods aren’t walkable due to broken up sidewalks or too many hilly areas for seniors to walk comfortably, or parents to push strollers. Some neighborhoods have more than their fair share of noise from sirens, semi-trailers, fireworks, barking dogs and, yes, gunshots on occasion. Residents might wonder, at times, why the city forgets about the East Side when it comes to filling potholes, fixing sidewalks, or controlling traffic noise. But, rarely do residents complain that East St. Paul isn’t interesting enough, diverse enough or friendly enough.

Few communities have the richness of multiculturalism as East St. Paul. The community is dotted with people bringing art and food and language from their home countries. Walking along main arteries throughout East St. Paul, one can see Hmong markets, Mexican bakeries, Italian eateries, African fare, co-ops, urban gardens, churches. Small business owners here are proud to serve the community and the community is dedicated to supporting their services. The Dayton’s Bluff library is a highly-prized treasure connected to Metropolitan State University Library. The Freedom Library is a one-of-a-kind gem offering a variety of community classes and a respite from everyday hubbub with its comfy chairs and reading spaces. East Side Learning Center is dedicated to the education of our youth who need a little boost to help them succeed in school. East Side Elders is equally as dedicated to serving seniors who need help with everyday challenges.

Living in East St. Paul, for some, is reminiscent of the small hometown where one may have been raised and gone to school when younger. Others have called East St. Paul home all their lives and can tell you anything you want to know about its past. There is a rich history in East St. Paul, especially the history of Swede Hollow. A Facebook page is dedicated to the history of East St. Paul; fascinating stories can be found there.

There are no skyscrapers in this community unless you live near the college and can see downtown St. Paul, but that hardly counts. There are several parks, many small strip malls, great coffee places, schools, diners with ethnic food or plain old American comfort food. Little Free Libraries in front of a number of houses offer yet another reason to stop and visit a neighbor.

St. Paul’s Convention and Visitor Center says: “Saint Paul’s East Side is home to delicious eats and deep roots, making it an explorer’s destination for culture, cuisine and history”. Wow!!! Who could ask for a better endorsement?

East St. Paul has the Dayton’s Bluff District Forum serving the community as a communication tool used to connect neighborhoods, individuals, and businesses. This newspaper is an enviable addition to East St. Paul that many communities don’t have. The paper which was originally printed each month and mailed to households, has not been able to sustain that expense and, sadly, had to resort to monthly online publication only. The revitalization of the print version will happen when individuals and business owners in the community pull together to support this vital communication vehicle that brings cohesiveness to East St. Paul.

In case you missed the first part, go to our October 2020 issue online and read all about how Swede Hollow Park was almost taken away for commercial business. There is even a beautiful photo of the new stairs leading from Bruce Vento Regional Trail to the creek.

Neighborhood groups made sure to keep the park cleaned up for the community to use.

The park was established in 1976. Go to daytonsbluffdistrictforum.org/Past%20issues/October2020.pdf to read the story.

Letter to the Editor

We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris for a multitude of reasons. We want to see growth in our economy, focus on climate change and our environment, support for our farmers and small businesses, an end to COVID-19 and peace, law, and order in our cities without racial tension.

We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris in order to move us toward an equitable and inclusive health care system. We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris in order to return imprisoned immigrant children to their parents. It's time to work with our Latin American neighbors toward peace that ends that need for thousands to flee their homeland. It's time to talk about the inhumanity of walls, instead talk about the humanity of treating each other with love, kindness, and inclusivity.

We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris in order to reinvigorate our economy with jobs that reduce our dependence on fossil fuels, expand broadband access, build infrastructure, create state-of-the-art rapid transit, and make our waterways safe, clean, and dependable.

We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris to restore our dignity globally; re-store the Voting Rights Act; strengthen our Social Security program for seniors; lift people out of poverty; re-join the Paris Climate Agreement; reign our status as a world leader in NATO.

We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris because everyone deserves a voice: Whether you have a disability; are male or female; LGBTQ or straight; Black, Brown, Native or White. We need a President for all Americans. Someone who will provide calm, steady leadership, listen to experts, and work in partnership with our global allies and friends.

We are voting for Joe Biden and Kamala Harris because we believe in unity and equality as stated in our Constitution.

When she was working here at Sweede Hollow Cafe full-time, Yang was also doing part-time work with her catering company — she has owned her catering company more than ten years. During the COVID crisis, Yang was thinking of transitioning to her catering business full-time, but with the Campbell’s selling, she decided, along with her business partners, to come back and buy the Sweede Hollow Cafe.

With millions of people losing their jobs in this COVID crisis and the business environment not very encouraging for a small family business like the Sweede Hollow Cafe, the group of three entrepreneurs that purchased the coffee shop are confident in their endeavor to be a light in the Dayton’s Bluff community. “Like I said before,” Yang declares, “it was a great opportunity because I worked here for so long. I see how the community has responded to the Sweede Hollow Cafe through Facebook. The people were asking, ‘When are you opening? When are you opening?’ and I decided there is a lot of demand for it, so why not?”

Yang wants to increase the number of employees, but that will depend on the demand of customers. If the governor opens the business capacity to 100 percent, she will probably need to hire more staff, but right now with her limited menu and hours, Yang can only hire a certain amount of people. At this time, it is at 50 percent capacity and Sweede Hollow Cafe is so small, Yang is using the first-floor space to stage all the “to go” orders, so she can’t allow anybody to sit in that room.

The Sweede Hollow Cafe limits seating to the upstairs and before COVID, it could only seat 20 or 30 people, but at six feet apart, it would only seat 10 to 15 people. People love the meeting room upstairs because of the small sunroom doors. It has a lot of natural light and the doors can be closed. Yang gets a lot of requests to use that room, but with the COVID crisis, she could fit only two groups in there.

Swede Hollow Cafe in the winter season — especially since downtown seating is so limited. The upstairs seating allowed more people to enjoy their coffee or drink of choice and gave the customers more privacy. “I like the connectiveness of the family here,” Shirley Yang said. “It feels like a family to me because I’ve worked here for a long, long time. I see the regulars a lot, and they consistently come in, and I know their name. It is like the “Cheers” thing where everybody knows your name. I see the connectiveness between the customers and us at Sweede Hollow Cafe.” — Mark Gallagher

The photo above shows a special event in front of the StoreHouse Grocery located at 851 East Seventh Street in October. Food was served from several African-American chefs as part of the catering group called “Saint Paul’s Finest.” There was lasagna, a special vegetable slider, mac and cheese, cookies, buttered beef, hibiscus tea, and cupcakes.

DFL & LABOR ENDORSED
In past years, in Iowa and then Saint Paul, I’ve participated in ‘citizen/police academies’ which provide, according to the SPPD website, “...For the participant to have some knowledge of the training received by the officers of the Saint Paul Police Department. For a better understanding of the policies and procedures that govern their everyday duties. For the Saint Paul Police Department to gain a better perspective of the issues that are important to the citizens. Another purpose of the academy is to open communication between the department and the citizens of Saint Paul.” Each session was informative and worth every minute, teaching me so many hows and whys from other perspectives, but also making me check in on my own perspectives and inner feelings.

Our Eastern District Saint Paul Police Department is currently offering an intro class to the American System of Criminal Justice, taught by Senior Commander Kurt Hiltstrom, who has taught the class for several years at Metropolitan State University. COVID19 is causing some juggling of time and space, but even after one class, I’m looking forward to book content and classmates’ perspectives and experiences, as pertaining to different and defining public policies; and, how we practice and administer the process and justice within our changing social and value systems.

(An aside: a few months ago I took it upon myself to rewrite several Saint Paul ordinances; I will benefit from classroom insight.)

I understand some people have knee-jerk reactions about policing, instantly negating what one might learn, leading to a better understanding, even agreeing. I liken openness or automatic close-mindedness to muscle memory of the mind. We get so accustomed to thinking or seeing one particular way, we don’t think any more; we don’t distinguish between reasons, thoughts, new paths to take...simply agree or react - mentally, verbally, and in action.

A well-meaning credit union staff offered to help me install an app one day...I nervously watched with fear as her fingers flew over my phone, praying that her thinking skills would keep a step ahead of her admirable dexterity. Oops! Muscle memory derailed from her thinking skills...and wiped out 400 photos on my phone (I know, I should have saved them elsewhere). It appears that I’m so used to thinking or seeing one particular way, we don’t distinguish between reasons, thoughts, new paths to take...simply agree or react - mentally, verbally, and in action.

With all that, do you want muscle memory propelling you? Or critical thinking, with a helpful basis of fact, knowledge and experience?
