Menards is Leaving But Will Return

Greg Cosimini

East Siders will have to temporarily find a new place to save big money when shopping for “plumbing, electrical, appliances too.” Our local Menards located at the intersection of Highways 61 and 36 in Maplewood will be closing on March 18. It will be torn down, along with six nearby houses, but will rise again in about a year as a much larger single level store, which unlike the current store, will have space for a full grocery section and other merchandise not always available at that store. All current employees have been placed at other Menards locations. East Side customers will have to find their way to other Menards such as the ones in Oakdale on Hadley Ave., in West St. Paul on Robert St. and in the Midway at Prior and University.

High School Students Can Earn Free College Credit & Personalize Their Education

Joe Nathan

West 7th Street high school students and families have terrific opportunities to earn free college credit and/or personalize their education in the next two months, thanks to many free public school options. Partly because of family encouragement, Minnesota legislators and educators have created many great opportunities. They can help youngsters identify and develop their gifts, talents, and interests. Options also can help young people develop vital basic and applied life skills.

In the next month, St. Paul families and students can select their school and high school classes for the 2022-23 school year. One of the most valuable options for high school students, starting for some in ninth grade, is to earn free college credit via courses taught in high school, on-line, or on college campuses.

Free Minnesota Post-Secondary Enrollment Option (PSEO) courses are available in "hands on" vocational and traditional academic subjects. Though not as well known, starting in 10th grade, students can take free vocational courses at two-year public colleges such as St. Paul and Century Colleges and the Finishing Trade Institute. Students in 11th or 12th grade can take academic courses at those and other colleges/universities, including Metro State. Admission requirements vary.

Students can take PSEO courses on college campuses or via internet. State law requires that high schools let students use school computers to take PSEO courses. Students must register for PSEO classes by May 30. Visit: education.mn.gov/mde/fam/dual/pseo/. PSEO is one of several ways students can earn free college credit, explore their interests, and prepare for employment and life.

Students in 10th through 12th grades who are proficient in any of the 27 world languages can earn free credit at Minnesota State Colleges and universities by passing tests (they don’t need to take a course). Languages include ASL, Arabic, Chinese, Dakota, German, Hmong, Karen, Ojibwe, Somali, and Spanish.

Virtual access allows every St. Paul public charter high school offers some college level courses — called Advanced Placement, International Baccalaureate, or Concurrent Enrollment/College in Schools. College credit for AP and IB is based mostly or entirely on how well a student does on the final exam. College credit for other courses depends on a student’s work throughout the course.

Minnesota’s Office of Higher Education explains dual college credit/university acceptance policies here: ohe.state.mn.us/mPg.cfm?pageID=2236.

Minnesota requires every student, working with their families and educators, to develop a post high school plan: revisior.mn.gov/statutes/cite/120B.125.

St. Paul Public Schools (spps.org/choosecpps) offers other valuable options such as language immersion, Montessori, and project-based learning.

West 7th families also have free charter public school options, such as Cyber Village Academy, Nova, St. Paul School of Northern Lights, Upper Mississippi Academy, Urban Academy and others. A map shows where charters are available: mncharter.org/directory/index.php/?intDirectoriesCatID=1#filters.

Fortunately, Minnesota families have more and more opportunities for a free, public, personalized education.

Changes Coming at the East Side Freedom Library

Peter Ruchleff and Beth Cleary

Co-Founders, Co-Executive Directors

Dear Sisters, Brothers, and Kin,

We are writing to share with you the exciting news that we, as co-founders, will be turning the reins of the East Side Freedom Library over to a new, full-time Executive Director in Spring, 2022. The ESFL Board, assisted by Anne Jin Soo Preston of Sahng Sahng LLC, has been preparing this transition for several months, and they will launch the public phase of its search process this month, with the release of the job announcement. The Board’s process in preparing for this transition has involved great integrity, and we are excited about the next stages in ESFL’s development.

Almost eight years ago, we negotiated a 15-year lease for Saint Paul’s historic East Side Carnegie Library. Through a visioning process with community members and collaborators, ESFL defined its mission: “to inspire solidarity, work for justice, and advocate for equity for all.” Through public programs — author events, open forums, film screenings, puppet shows, picnics — ESFL has invited thousands of participants, of all backgrounds and ages, to consider community members and collaborators, ESFL defined its mission: “to inspire solidarity, work for justice, and advocate for equity for all.” Through public programs — author events, open forums, film screenings, puppet shows, picnics — ESFL has invited thousands of participants, of all backgrounds and ages, to consider complex ideas, talk with each other across differences, and dream their neighbor- hood, Saint Paul’s East Side. The people here share an inspiring vision of community and world, forward.

We understand that ESFL’s address is not simply 1105 Greenbrier Street in Saint Paul. The Library, both place and purpose, is a crossroads of histories and communities. Built in 1917 by an initiative among European immigrants and their descendants, the Library building sits on land that has actually been stewarded, for centuries, by Dakota people. The more recent histories of this area have been determined by new groups of migrants: job-seekers from other parts of the U.S.; Hmong, Bhutanese, and Karen refugees from southeast Asia; Ethiopian, Oromo, Eritrean, and Somali groups fleeing war and climate disaster in East Africa; people fleeing violence and employment deprivation in central and South America. ESFL’s programming lifts up the vivid histories and cultures of the East Side and creates ways for people to tell their histories, share and develop cultural practices, and forge a democratic, dignified future together.

Our reliance on volunteer labor has been driven by economic realities and also because we advance our work shapes the ends we attain. Collaborators have cataloged and shelved books, built shelves, gardened, fixed plumbing, blogged, prepared mailings, organized and hosted events. Through their work, they have deepened ESFL’s mission and laid a path for its future. So, too, have our Board members and our staff colleagues, Clarence White and Kimberly David. We know that this project is in good hands.

With confidence and optimism, we prepare ourselves and ESFL for the next stage in the Library’s journey. We will remain involved, enthusiastically, as guides and collaborators. The new Executive Director will work with an engaged and expanding Board, a talented staff that will surely grow, and superb community partners, funders, and collaborators. We have been honored to establish the East Side Freedom Library in our neighbor- hood, Saint Paul’s East Side. The people here share an inspiring vision of community and world, where love and solidarity are at the center of everyday life.

The Frozen Greenhouse
Mandy Okonek

The promise of viewing living plants and flowers in the cold winter months lured me into downtown to view an art installation featuring an actual greenhouse surrounded by ice. This particular exhibit was a part of many public art pieces curated by The Great Northern Festival whose mission statement is geared to celebrate our subzero winter months with art and activities aimed to invigorate the mind and body.

Like a typical Minnesotan, I jumped up and down to stay warm while I waited in line to see the inside of the ice castle-like structure that was temporarily erected in the alley between the painted parking lot and historic Pioneer Endicott building on 141 E. 4th Street. I noticed a glow of purple lighting that radiated through the ice walls as I worked to recall the last time I had waited to get into an alley. As I proceeded to move forward, I could see the glass structure housed within walls of ice and an array of thriving plants with a distinct darker-than-green hue, and I recognized a few of the plants as black petunias and black coneflowers, some of my favorites. When I reached the front of the line and had the opportunity to chat with the woman manning the door, I learned the color palette of the plants was no coincidence. The greenhouse was a metaphor for black lives.

My family entered in silence, grateful to feel the warmth of a community of plants and flowers thriving within walls of thick ice. Speakers inside the greenhouse amplified the sounds of the ice as it melted and cracked. Seeing anything grow in the winter is generally a cause for jovial celebration. However, the dark purplish plants thriving within sheets of thick ice reminded me of all the wildflowers that I see in the summer sprouting through cracks of broken pavement, and I emerged outside into the bitter cold filled with empathy. My family discussed ways we can be allies to our community members frozen in metaphorical ice on the car ride home. This exhibit did more than invigorate our minds and bodies. It was a call to action.

The Greenhouse was a collaboration between artists, Jovan C. Speller and Andy DuCett, who received grants to fund their work from the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation and the City of Saint Paul Cultural STAR program. The Great Northern Festival has concluded for this season, but you can get the jump on next year’s festivities with a visit to their website, thegreatnorthernfestival.com.

East Seventh St. and Arcade St. Improvement Project
MdOT Website

MnDOT is improving safety for all users along East 7th St. (Hwy 5) and Arcade St. (Hwy 61) from I-94 in St. Paul to Roselawn Ave. in Maplewood. Design and engineering are underway, and construction is anticipated to begin in summer 2024. Improvements for this project area include: ADA accessibility improvements, safety improvements for people walking and rolling, curb and sidewalk improvement, lighting improvements, traffic light replacements, roadway resurfacing, and stormwater drainage updates. In 2021, we gathered community feedback on desired improvements on East 7th St. and Arcade St. Shortly after, we successfully applied for a federal RAISE grant, for additional funds to support the community vision of better access for all. Using community feedback in 2021, we have put together some design ideas for improvements along East 7th St. and Arcade St.

We recognize that areas along East 7th St. and Arcade St. are unique and vary depending on the neighborhood character, property uses, road design, and people’s interest in walking, biking, rolling, and using buses. To reflect these differences, we have broken up the project area into seven sections and are providing different design ideas for each section. For more information, detailed area maps, and to take a survey about this project, visit talk.dot.state.mn.us/e7tharcade.

“Maids maids maids put on your tea kettle-ette” from the shores of Lake Phalen. If the ice melts by late March, I should look for blue herons fishing at pond and lake shores, and double-crested cormorants fishing at Lake Phalen or flying overhead. Cormorants are big and all black, and when flying their wings are halfway between head and tail. By late March chipping sparrows — “Chip chip chip chip” — might be heard in neighborhood trees.

Eighteen more species of birds arrive on the East Side as early as the first two weeks of April, with 12 more by the end of April. It’s fun to see red-breasted mergansers, with their head feathers sticking up, stopping to fish at Lake Phalen or flying overhead. Cormorants are big and all black, and when flying their wings are halfway between head and tail. By late March chipping sparrows — “Chip chip chip chip” — might be heard in neighborhood trees.

Twelve species in my data have shown up in the East Side of Saint Paul by mid-March. The arrival time of common mergansers, common goldeneyes, red-breasted mergansers and common loons depends on when ice on the local lakes melts. In 2014 ice went out early at Lake Phalen but not up north. That year my husband Paul and I counted 56 in Duluth, Superior, and in this case, a small island just off Lake Superior. For high-protein food on the trees, they like to stop at blooming native plum trees at Frost Lake Park east of Lake Phalen to sip nectar and eat insects. It’s hard to believe that spring is right around the corner and millions of birds will be migrating north through our neighborhood soon. They pay their way by keeping bug populations down on trees.
EV Spot Network Comes to Dayton's Bluff

You may have seen a couple of Chevy Bolt electric cars parked between two strange looking blue monoliths on Margaret St. across from St. John Lutheran Church and wondered what that was all about. This is the start of the new EV Spot Network which has come to parts of the East Side, including Dayton's Bluff. According to the Envie Carshare website, “The EV Spot Network is built by the Twin Cities for the Twin Cities. It includes an on-street electric vehicle charging network called EV Spot Charging, and on-street shared electric vehicles, called Envie Carshare. EV Spot Charging is 100% renewably powered and enables charging for personally owned and Envie Carshare vehicles within Saint Paul and Minneapolis.”

In other words, the Chevy Bolts are electric vehicles that can be rented for use in Envie's service area. They are charged at one of the blue charging stations. The other blue charging station is available for charging a driver's own electric vehicle with capacity for two vehicles at a time.

The Envie service area in Saint Paul, which includes parts of Dayton's Bluff and the Payne-Phalen neighborhoods, is bounded by Maryland Ave. on the north, Earl St. on the east and Hudson Road on the south. From there it extends to downtown and farther west into Minneapolis.

The installation on Margaret St. is the first to be built in Dayton's Bluff. Two more will follow at Conway and Bates near the Dayton's Rec Center with another at Bates and E. 7th Street. There are also two in the Payne-Phalen area with two more to follow.

Again from the website: “The City of Saint Paul, in partnership with the City of Minneapolis, Xcel Energy, HOUR CAR, and others, is rolling out EV Spot Charging starting this week [the first week of February] and continuing through 2022 to support increased access to and the use of electric vehicles.”

St. Paul March Events in History
Steve Trumble

March 12, 1902: Newspapers called her “the girl in whom everyone is interested.” Her body was discovered just west of the railway station at Dayton’s Bluff. It had been run over by a train on this day. Her neck was nearly cut off and one foot had been amputated. It was determined that she was four foot nine, weighed 135 pounds, and appeared to be a Scandinavian. She had been wearing a cowboy hat and appeared to be a Scandinavian. She had never identified.

March 25, 1888: The first of a series of investigative articles called “Among the Girls Who Toil,” appeared in the St. Paul Globe. Revealing the lives of working women in the Twin Cities, they were written by Eva McDonald Valesh, under the pseudonym of “Eva Gay.” One of her early articles revealed long hours, unhealthy conditions, and low wages faced by women who worked in a local garment factory. When the women there went on strike less than a month later, her writing was credited with setting off the protest.

Born in Maine in 1866, the daughter of a politically active father, Valesh moved to Minnesota as a child. As a typesetter in a print shop, she joined a typesetter’s union, sparking her interest in labor issues. She continued writing for the Globe for more than a year, going undercover as a factory worker, a domestic worker, and a store clerk.

She was “laid at rest by strangers hands,” as one paper put it, “her head pillowed gently to one side, her still fair and comely forehead, half concealed by white roses and pink carnations and the long ringlets of her gold brown hair.” She was never identified.

Have you become increasingly more aware of changes in attitudes? Attitudes of drivers on streets or in parking lots; customers and store clerks; care providers in clinics or hospitals, etc. I’m guessing you try to adjust your patience and attitude with consideration of fewer staff and service workers, many staff filling in without the knowledge base of the “regulars,” offering a more patient attitude because we might assume the person helping us has been working long hours, extra shifts, perhaps is suffering through their own shortage of family and household help.

All that left me earlier this week when I came home to find a car parked on the street, with its nose partially in my drive. I began to turn into the drive, thinking I could make it around the nose, except my car’s wheelbase doesn’t make such a sharp turn, plus, I would be in danger of hitting a solid ice berm at the side of the drive apron. I backed up next to the car, a black sport convertible with a 20-something male, heavy metal shirt, on his phone, behind the wheel.

“Hi, I need to get into my drive, would you mind backing up a bit, please?” Except for a police car in front of my neighboring house and a vehicle across the street, there was plenty of space for him. But he refused, immediately yelling at me that if I could drive a car, I could get past him...that he was fine where he was, and I could go f— myself. I replied that actually, the law states that he needs to be five feet from a driveway. He yelled again, swearing, and then I raised my voice, told him to go talk to the officer (if in the squad); told him what an idiot he was. Of course, when he threw open his car door and jumped out screaming at me, I quickly rolled up my window and locked the door. But he did go over to the squad (I doubt the officer was there); at the same time, the person he was apparently waiting for came across the street and they both got into the car...the driver pulled away, still screaming out his window at me with the last words: “I hope you climb some high steps and fall down them and DIE!”

My anger left me, as I suddenly felt I was on a playground with six-year-olds. I was sorry I joined in his initial yelling. Maybe he had been on the phone with bad news. Though I felt a brief release in yelling, I mainly regretted it because I felt I lost something of myself in going to that level. I gave him points for the “hope you die” curse as I watched the sports car being driven off by a six-year-old (in my mind) and I could laugh.

I followed up with a conversation with my sister, readdressing my own attitude, letting go, facing up, and laughing: Whatever happens in life, whether a major event or day to day pandemic instances, will help shape us, but does not need to define us at our worst.

Gorditas el Durango

I dropped by the Plaza Del Sol to see how things were going and to see if the Tamali restaurant was still there. They were not and neither was the former steak restaurant. It was still there. They had already been looking for a larger space at a reasonable rent, so they decided to move to St. Paul.

Gordita el Durango is in an open space with six tables for four and another spot with a table and chairs for six. A row of padded benches are along two walls. There were some decorations like painted sculls and a map of Durango on the wall. There are a few red poinsettia plants and four padded stools along a counter area with a small television. At the counter where you order there are large photos of most of the menu items. The restaurant is proud to say on their Facebook that they have “the one and only flour & corn gorditas in the Twin Cities.”

Gorditas el Durango serves traditional Mexican cuisine. Gordita means “chubby” in English and the name fits the dish, which is a corn or flour pastry filled with meat and/or vegetables such as beans and cheese. Gorditas el Durango offers over 10 filling options along with other traditional Mexican dishes.

In addition to gorditas, the establishment has tacos, Huevos Rancheros, Menudo, a Mexican tripe soup, pozole, a traditional soup or stew from Mexican cuisine, made from hominy with meat, burrito de desprenderse, and pozole burrito de espedrada asado. There is picadillo rojo (ground pork and rice) and picadillo en verde in green salsa.

I decided on getting a couple of corn gorditas since they are in the name of the restaurant, and I found out on-line that they are very popular in the Mexican state of Durango. I decided I should try the family’s specialty. I got one filled with shredded beef and one with shredded pork. They came with sides of refried beans and rice. Since they have no beer yet I opted for a bottle of lime Jaritos drink.

In my initial visit I talked with Manuel Rutiaga, the owner, who named the restaurant after his state in Mexico. He put a map of Durango in the restaurant “to represent the authentic taste of Durango.” It really is a family-run restaurant. After my meal I also talked to Nathalia Medina, Rutiaga’s sister. She emphasized that they valued giving customers an experience with their own hometown.

When I was there at 4 p.m. there were only a few people. I was told that it was most busy from 10 a.m. until 2 or 3 p.m. All of the staff were wearing masks. There seems to be quite a bit of street parking and I got lucky and found a spot right in front.
